OUR 56TH YEAR | 10¢ PER COPY | SIKESTON, SCOTT COUNTY, MISSOURI, FRIDAY, JANUARY 5, 1968 | NUMBER 85

Music Teacher for 81 Years Descendant of Daniel Boone

BY LEO SCHADE

CHARLESTON, MO.-- Pride in her ancestry, her adopted home in Charleston and 81 years service as a music teacher light up the life of Miss Kate Boone, a vocal and piano instructor. She is 96.

Miss Boone is a descendant of Kentucky Frontiersman Daniel Boone.

One of her voice pupiles was Betty Cooper, who became the wife of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

"She has a beautiful voice," she said.

The aged, nearly blind woman gives lessons in her quarters at Host House, a nursing home. She began to lose her sight 25 years ago and six years ago became almost blind.

She uses a strong light on her piano to teach and minimizes the glare by wearing an eyeshade.

One of her voice pupils is Kathy DeLaney, 16-year-old high school sophomore, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert DeLaney. She is the sixth generation of her family who Miss Boone has taught including her great, great grandmother.

Miss Boone, who thinks she may be the nation's oldest music teacher, doesn't believe that rock and roll is music but she insists that "all music has its place."

"Every child should begin with classical music because it is the basis of all music," she said.

She acknowledges that jazz has merit.

"Guy Lombardo and a few other top band leaders produce beautiful music," she enthuses.

Miss Boone lived 22 years in her native Clinton, Ky. Her great, great grandfather, Squire Bryant Boone, was a brother of Daniel Boone. Her father was born in 1826 six years after Daniel Boone's death.

Although Miss Boone relates that she "never did have a knack for history" because of devotion to music, she recalls hearing stories in her home about the frontiersman.

The family moved to Charleston in 1893. Her father was a vegetable gardener. She is the youngest and last surviving child of Judge William Fenton Boone and Mrs. Boone. She had 10 brothers and two sisters.

Her father died in 1900 and her mother died in 1908.

Oldtime Mississippi county residents recall A. R. Boone, her brother, who was a superintendent of schools and state representative; James Boone, a lawyer, another brother; and two sisters, Mrs. J. E. Hicks and Mrs. J. E. Bowers.

"I started to take piano lessons at the age of six and continued doing so all through my years in college," Miss Boone recalls. "There were two colleges in Clinton, the Methodist and Baptist, and I attended both for short periods."

I earned most of my education and music knowledge by assisting in teaching music, first at Nashville College for Young Ladies at the age of 16, and remained there four years. I taught music at Dr. Price's College in Nashville, Marvin College at Martin, Tenn., and Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tenn., and came to Charleston to continue my music teaching career.

"Naturally, I am proud of my adopted state of Missouri, and Charleston, the home of Governor Hearnes."

On her last birthday she received a mail greeting from President Lyndon Johnson.

New Madrid to Reorganize Its Chamber of Commerce

NEW MADRID - Merchants and businessmen Thursday night voted to enlarge and organize the Chamber of Commerce.

Ninety - seven attended. The meeting originally had been called to discuss formation of a merchants and businessmen association after announcement was made that Noranda Mines Limited would build an aluminum processing plant here.

It was decided that the community needs a strong Chamber of Commerce with the eventual hiring of a full-time manager.

Bill Huff, president of the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce, and Richard Pinkerton, Sikeston Chamber of Commerce manager, discussed the benefits Sikeston has received through its Chamber and answered questions about its activities.

Jim Cravens acted as temporary chairman.

The group voted to start immediately a membership campaign and approved a sliding membership fee based on the size of the business. The minimum is $25.

Appointed to the membership committee were Bill Thompson, Bob Seeman, Geen French, Pete Stover, D.B. Riley, Sam Pennybaker, Corbett Davis, Eastman Fuller, Harold Sloas, Mrs. Edward Shibley, Bob King, S. M. Baird and Bob Blades.

The group agreed to rewrite the bylaws of the old chamber. Appointed to the bylaws committee were Larry Rost, Blades, Hal Hunter Jr., L. H. Recker and Cravens.

Hunter spoke on the possibility of forming a county-wide Chamber of Commerce. The group voted to invite representatives from area towns to the next meeting, set for Jan. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the community building.

Trial Remap Plan Drawn By Copeland

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — When Missouri's legislators convene in special session Jan. 12, they'll have a sample redistricting bill to work from.

They can accept it or, as is more probable, make substantial changes in the lines that carve the state into 10 congressional districts. A federal court knocked out the 1967 congressional redistricting a week ago.

Now Gov. Warren E. Hearnes is planning a two-way attack on the problem— get the effectiveness of the court rejection either delayed or overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court or get a new redistricting law from the legislature.

Both procedures are fraught with obstacles, not the least of which would be to get two-thirds approval in each house of the Missouri Legislature to make any new redistricting plan become effective immediately in this election year.

Candidates must file for Congress by April 30 but at this moment they don't have any districts to run in.

Rep. Fred E. Copeland, D-New Madrid, chairman of the House redistricting committee, acted at Hearnes' request by drawing a new plan for realigning the districts in accordance with federal one-man, one-vote decisions.

He said the districts he completed Thursday varied less than 1 per cent from the average district population of 431,981. The districts rejected last week by the federal court varied around 4 per cent.

Both Copeland and Hearnes called the new plan just a start from which the special legislative session can work toward a product that could win the necessary majority approval.

It's already produced some action and criticism around the state.

William Burlison, Cape Girardeau County prosecuting attorney, said he intended to continue his campaign for the Democratic nomination in the 10th District of southeastern Missouri no matter how thlines are drawn.

Rep. David Rolwing, D-Charleston, announced he had decided not to run for Congress. Instead, he said, he would seek a return to the Missouri House.

Another state legislator, Rep. James P. (Pal) Troupe, D-St. Louis, decided not to try to become Missouri's first Negro congressman. He said he would not run in the 1st congressional District but, instead, would try to come back to the Missouri House.

Copleland said he didn't know the effect of his new bill politically. His primary purpose was to draft a redistricting plan that would meet the federal mandate, he said.

But it appeared to some the plan would not be acceptable to St. Louis Negroes or to the Republicans in the 2nd District of St. Louis County— where Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, R-Webster Groves, has become a veteran congressman.

This time Curtis has decided to seek the GOP U.S. senatorial nomination.

Rep. R. J. (Bus) King, R-Clayton, House minority leader, said it seriously cut into the Republican edge in the 2nd. He called it an effort to "completely neutralize the entire Republican vote in St. Louis County."

A Negro House member, Rep. Raymond Howard, D-St. Louis, was even more critical. He said the urban Negro vote was so split that his race would have little chance in the 1st District.

"We would fight that plan until we die," he said. "If we do not get a district carved out for Negroes, the Democratic party will suffer at the polls."

Another change produced by the Copeland plan would be to switch Richard H. Ichord, D-Houston, from the 8th District to the 10th. Some effort was made to produce that change last year but it fell through.

Still, no matter how the districts are drawn or who does it there will be lots of opposition in a legislature composed of 183 House members and 34 senators— each one with his own political obligations or aspirations.

Here's how Copeland proposed the state be re-aligned for Congress:

1st District (population 431,946) — St. Louis County townships of Normandy, Washington, Lincoln and Jefferson plus the city wards 1, 2, 3, 4, 18, 20, 21, 22, 25, 26, 27 and 28.

Current Taxes 90 Per Cent Collected Now

City tax collections, now about 90 per cent completed, continue to trickle in as more and more motorists are purchasing their city stickers, city collector Ronald Lee reported.

So far, 4,687 city auto licenses have been purchased of the 6,500 due to be sold.

About $267,187, or 90 per cent of the total $296,875.52 in real estate, personal property and merchants and manufactures taxes due, have been collected.

More money was taken in during December, 1966, than was collected this December. But collections in October and November this year were greater than for the same two months last year, Lee said.

A deluge of last minute taxpayers lined the city administration building Saturday. The doors were closed at noon, but collections were not completed till 1:30 p.m.

Taxes incur a penalty charge of one per cent per month after Jan. 2.

Total current taxes collected in December were $125,429.79. Real estate taxes accounted for $89,346.38; personal property taxes came to $29,157.44 and merchants and manufacturers taxes brought the city $6,925.97.

Delinquent real estate taxes paid in December for 1963-66, totaled $1,069.92. Delinquent personal property taxes for 1963-66, paid in December totaled $131.68. Back merchants and manufacturers taxes for 1966, paid last month came to $19.91.

License collections brought in $16,200.53. Auto licenses accounted for $13,158 of the total while merchants licenses brought in $3,014.53. Dog licenses accounted for another $28.

Miscellaneous collections last month totaled $3,147.08, with the $2,995.78 monthly franchise payment by Associated Natural Gas accounting for the bulk of it. Interest amounted to $144.40 and other costs were $6.90.

The total collections for the month came to $145,998.91.

New Madrid County Education Board Explains School Merger Position

NEW MADRID -- The county board of education has proposed the reorganization of seven school districts into one district to prevent reorganization of the county's districts by the state, a statement prepared by the county board reports.

The board's position is made in a mimeographed brochure distributed at a meeting in Portageville. At the meeting representatives of the state department of education at Jefferson City discussed the advantages of the proposed reorganization.

The board said it has based its decision to call for reorganization because of a bill passed by the state legislature and signed into law by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes in the last session.

The law provides for creation of a commission to study all school districts in Missouri. The law states:

"The Missouri school district reorganization commission shall develop a master plan for school district reorganization over the entire state."

This plan will be delivered to the state board of education by Nov. 15. The board will examine the plan and make its recommendations to the legislature Jan. 15, 1969 at the next regular session of the legislature.

"This, in the opinion of all the school people in the state, simply means that there will be reorganization in the state of Missouri either by voluntary means or by legislation as a result of the master plan," the county board states.

Hubert Wheeler, state commissioner of education, has stated that the 815 school districts in the state should be reduced to not more than 135 districts" so that it is apparently the feeling in the state department of education and it will be their recommendation to the legislature that reorganization take place by some means in the whole state," the board continues.

The county board said that it believes that the commission and the state department of education will consider the population centers in the state when the master plan is made.

New Madrid County has no population centers, the board notes. The county consists of a number of small communities, all about the same size, and the problems and their solutions are similar throughout the county, the board states.

"It is further believed that under a master plan New Madrid County would be divided up and become part of school districts in which there was a population center, as we have a population center lying on the north boundary, one on the west boundary, and the center south of the county and east of the county, all of which would result in the present school districts being a part of other districts in other counties."

The county and local school boards and superintendents have expressed the belief that the proposed reorganized district would be large enough to be accepted by the commission and the state department of education and be incorporated in the master plan, especially if the district had been approved by the district's patrons.

The proposed reorganization includes the Portageville, Lilbourn, Matthews, New Madrid, Parma, Morehouse and Higgerson districts.

It has been determined by school officials in the county that the most pressing need is in the trade and technical area and that the proposed district would be large enough to support building and operating a centrally located technical school.

The county board recommends no change in the operation or location of any existing elementary, junior high or high schools. All schools would operate as now," so long as it remained satisfactory with the people."

A survey of county schools conducted by the state department of education in 1967 showed that 70 per cent of the students attending schools in the county terminated their education at the high school level; 30 per cent went on to college.

"This 70 per cent should be offered technical training so as to better fit them to complete in today's market for jobs. This was a recommendation by the survey team," the board says.

The location of the new technical school would be determined by a new board of education, which would be elected after the reorganization plan was approved.

The county board said it would recommend to the new board that it appoint advisory committees of about six from each of the present districts to make recommendations on the location. The county board recommended that the location of the technical school be determined at the same time a bond issue would be submitted to voters to construct and equip the school.

"This would require a two-thirds majority of the voters and would require approval of location as well as issuance of bonds," the board said.

School superintendents in the county were reported to believe that a $2.75 tax rate would be necessary to operate the existing schools. An additional 50 cent levy would be necessary to pay the present bonded indebtedness and the necessary bonding to construct and equip the new technical school.

This would made the tax levy of the new district $3.25 on the $100 valuation.

The superintendents' estimate was made without including any federal funds, which might be available for constructing, equipping and operating the technical school.

If such funds were available, the district could operate at a lesser tax rate, the board feels.

If reorganization is approved, a new six-member school board will be elected. The county board recommends that each of the six high school districts -- Higgerson is an elementary school district -- represented by one director on the new board.

The new district would have an assessed valuation of about $43 million and "would be one of the larger and financially sounder districts in any rural area in the state," the board said.

At the public meeting at Portageville questions were raised about whether vocational training could be offered by separate school districts without reorganization.

B. W. Robinson, assistant commissioner and director of vocational education for the state department of education at Jefferson City, explained that no existing school district in the county support a vocational school.

In an enlarged school district there would be more students to support a varied offering of programs. Also, if the school were built and operated by only one of the existing districts, that district could not tax the other districts using the school's facilities, he explained.

It therefore could not raise enough money to build and operate a vocational school, which is an expensive venture, he said.

Members of the county board are Lyle Bird, Matthews, president; Charles Pikey, Conran, vice president; James Fletcher, Gideon; A. C. Riley, New Madrid; Comer Hicks, Risco; Tom Maschmeier, Lilbourn, and Sam Bodine, New Madrid secretary and nonvoting member.

The proposed date for the reorganization vote was Jan. 9, but the election has been postponed by a temporary injunction. It was ordered after petitioners of the Morehouse C-12 district requested postponement of the election until they can vote on whether to annex the C-12 district to the Sikeston R-6 district.

Special Judge Rex Henson of Poplar Bluff will rule Feb. 5 on whether to make the injunction permanent and require the C-12 board of education to call a special election proposing the annexation of the C-12 district to the R-6 district.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS! MONUMENTALLY MENACING PSYCHE INVASION?

The 556-question Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory is given students in every section of the country, and government and industry use the test to screen potential employees. More than 700,000 copies of the test were sold to school boards and employers in the past year.

The test has been denounced by Congressional investigators and by psychologists as an outrageous invasion of privacy. Dr. Karl Smith, a professor of industrial psychology at the University of Wisconsin, told the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights that the MMPI is a "form of medical quackery." He described the test as "double-talk, double-dealing, discriminatory, simple-minded and claptrap."

Junior high school students are required to answer true-false questions such as these:

.My sex life is satisfactory.

.I am very strongly attracted to members of my own sex.

.I have never engaged in an unusual sex practice.

.Christ performed miracles such as changing water to wine.

.I go to church almost every week.

On this and other personality tests, Martin Gross, author of The Brain Watchers, has conducted extensive research. He describes them as inaccurate, immoral instruments whose use should be prohibited by law.

"The extent of this testing is frightening. It is used in the selection and upgrading of men and women in every area of life, from ministers to defense workers. It is used almost routinely in the American school system, without the knowledge or permission of parents, in an invasion of privacy that is supported by the taxpayer."

Another who has directed an intensive probe of personality tests used in American schools is Cornelius Gallagher, Democratic Congressman from New Jersey. He says a "Measurement of Wants" test given California students asked how much money they would need to:

.Spit on the crucifix.

.Eat a pound of flesh.

.Desecrate a church service.

Another test, designed to probe the student's "moral values inventory," sets up alternatives and asks the students to choose one over the other. Examples are:

.Which is worse, denying the existence of God or hurting the feelings of a friend?

.Which is worse, blasphemy or using an obscene word in referring to one's own mother?

.Which is worse, spitting on the Bible or spitting on the American flag?

In Maryland, Baltimore students were given a test which asked whether any of 355 statements applied to them. Typical queries, cast in the form of statements are:

.Many of my dreams are about sex matters.

.During one period when I was a youngster I stole things.

.I wish I were not bothered by thoughts of sex.

.There has been a lack of real affection and love in my home.

Although given to school children throughout the country, these tests are shrouded in secrecy. Children who take the tests are admonished not to tell their parents the contents of the questions asked.

One major firm that sells these tests warns in the accompanying instructions: "Strict adherence to all test security instructions is strongly urged to prevent any security breaches and the serious consequences thereof."

Objections that sex and religion are private matters of no concern to school boards and prospective employees have been dismissed by those who devise the tests. States the author of the MMPI tests, "I don't think you can live that way today. I believe that in a society that has to work together, our personalities impinge on one another. We all make decisions about what kind of people we like or don't like. Tests are merely tools to help make such decisions."

So, this kind of testing of students continues despite denouncement by Congressional investigators and psychologists that the tests are outrageous invasions of privacy.

Mrs. Joan Zola felt the full impact of this psyche probing when she applied for a position with one of the largest government agencies in Washington. In National Review, she wrote about her experience during numerous interviews, security checks and tests designed to assess skills required for the government job. Next came a medical examination which included psychological testing and an encounter with the MMPI. Having studied psychology courses in college, Mrs. Zola was quite familiar with most of the tests administered. She proceeded to give the "right" answers to impertinent questions about her morals, sex life, and attitude toward God.

The last so-called test was composed of questions requiring essay-type answers. Realizing that her testers wanted details about her parents' private lives, her moral convictions, more on her own sex life, and so forth, applicant Zola supplied a few short sentences, such as "My mother is a good mother," left the rest blank, and closed the book.

Next came an interview with the doctor. When asked why she had not answered most of the questions she replied that she considered such matters to be none of the Agency's business, since they dealt with neither her qualifications nor her loyalty, nor did they have any particular bearing on her moral character.

This interview she described as one of long silences, interrupted by such remarks from the doctor as, "I see you're a Catholic. Do you ever hear voices, see visions?"

He wanted to know how she squared her moral principles with her sex drive, and how she fared romantically. Just to please him she made up a romance in Paris. She was sent back to Personnel; and several weeks later, to her surprise, she was told that she had the job.

The Agency flew her from her home in California to Washington where she met her instructors and was ready to start training. But, oops, there came word from the medical section that she hadn't answered all the questions. She said that if the job depended on answering questions she considered offensive, then she didn't want the job. Next was a chat with yet another brain-watcher, who prescribed two more days of tests.

Mrs. Zola could figure which were the desired answers. Eventually, however, they wore her down to the point where she balked. When asked what she considered the most important thing in life, she ignored the psychologically-sound answers of sex, money, and friendliness and answered: "Saving my soul." Her inability to draw pictures elicted the doctor's comment: "difficulty depicting human beings."

A third doctor lectured her on her attitude.

Mrs. Zola, a Fulbright scholar, writes of the interview with Doctor Number Three:

". . . did I understand why they were doing this; what did I mean, the tests gave phony results, blah, blah. The doctor's voice rose steadily and at last he fairly shouted, so help me, 'Would you have any respect for us if we let you get away with this?"

The folks in Personnel later told her she "should have lied cooperatively like everybody else."

When word finally came that she was unacceptable, Personnel offered to fly her home to California, or find her another job in Washington.

Mrs. Zola's parting shot answers a question about cost that bureauchiatrists will never include in a test:

"The amount of money the whole thing cost the taxpayers pains one, but wasn't it worth it to have preserved the image of a well-adjusted Agency, free from surly dissidents harping on privacy?"

Most of us today accept testing as "voluntary." Yet even psychiatrists admit that the questions asked on psychological questionnaires are cleverly designed to trap the subject. Through his answers he is led to reveal subconscious attitudes and reactions of which he himself may not be aware. Are we no longer entitled the right to privacy and to our individual personalities?

Here are some sample true-and-false questions taken from psychological and personality tests used by Federal agencies:

.I like to listen to and tell jokes in which sex plays a major part.

.I believe women ought to have as much sexual freedom as men.

.I think Lincoln was greater than Washington.

.Sometimes I am strongly attracted by the personal articles of others, such as shoes, gloves, etc., so that I want to handle or steal them though I have no use for them.

.It takes a lot of argument to convince most people of the truth.

.I have often had to take orders from someone who did not know as much as I did.

.I know who is responsible for most of my troubles.

.I believe there is a Devil and a Hell in afterlife.

As Martin Gross has pointed out, most of the tests being used are unreliable. The Government's use of psychological tests for Federal employees constitutes "one of the most reprehensible invasions of privacy and denial of Constitutional rights extant today," he says.

"We have become a nation of snoopers," charged Representative Gallagher. "Now the magic of the computer is helping to gather such a wealth of information. . . that all of us may some day stand psychologically naked."

The American people are becoming more and more aware of the inroads being made by the privacy invaders; they are becoming more and more concerned over the implications of this invasion; and they are making their feelings known.

House and Senate committees have been at work for some time trying to unravel the often sordid story of privacy invasion via psychological testing and electronic snooping and even snooping into first-class mail without a search warrant. No device is being overlooked, not even the biggest martini olive for cocktail party eavesdropping; but these committees need the support and cooperation of all thoughtful Americans.

RESTLESS DRIVE OF INDUSTRY

Corporate growth has reached almost astronomical proportions. It has been accompanied by increasing concern in many quarters with the inherent dangers of bigness. But, those who have held sincere reservations about industrial growth may find solid comfort in a characteristic of this growth that is typically American - technological change.

The restless searching for a better way to do things that has been the hallmark of progress in this country is, if anything, more pronounced today than ever before. In a hundred years or so, we have come from the covered wagon to the supersonic jet. Major industries of a century ago are as extinct as the Passenger Pigeon. No one really knows what life will be like 50 or 100 years from now.

With increasing frequency, we read of such things as the development of a fuel cell power plant, which could conceivably revolutionize the energy business. A recent news release tells of a move by more than a score of gas systems and gas utility companies to push a large-scale research program, looking to the development of just such a power plant that would be practicable and marketable. The program is estimated to cost $20 million, and of course, the aim is to find larger markets for natural gas in competition with other energy industries. Whether the fuel cell is a harbinger of things to come is anyone's guess.

The important thing, so far as the public is concerned, is that the restless drive and competitive urge of industry is very much alive. This is well demonstrated by the gas industry itself, which was a comparative infant a mere decade or so ago.

OLD DISSENTER BUT 100 PCT. LOYAL

If there really are some young people who believe that no one over 30 is to be trusted, they should be two and half times as wary of advice from an octogenarian.

But just on the chance that age and wisdom are not incompatible, they might profitably reflect on some sentiments expressed the other day by Norman Thomas, six-time Socialist party candidate for the presidency, who will be 83 on Nov. 20.

Thomas is nearly blind, is crippled by arthritis and injuries from an automobile accident and suffers fromheart trouble and "a catalogue of infirmities."

None of which has anything to do with the functioning of his mind, as evident in what may have been his farewell speech, given before an international conference of students.

"I don't like the sight of young people burning the flag of my country, the country I love," said the elder statesman of American dissenters.

While acidly critical of the administration's handling of the Vietnam war, among other things, Thomas emphasized to the students that he had affection as well as criticism for his country.

Affection for country. This is something modern - day dissenters could display a little more of - not the conventional patriotism that waves the flag and shouts, "My country, right or wrong," but an affection that springs from a deep belief in and loyalty to the ideals on which the nation was founded.

Affection for country. It marks the difference between an old crusader who will go on championing those ideals until his last breath and those whose motto seems to be: "Turn on, drop out and tear down."

An American sigh-seeing in London while on vacation, was standing near the gate at Buckingham Palace. He noticed in particular a very pretty English girl walking down the street, who was having considerable trouble in getting her dress to stay down because of the strong wind.

Just as the girl was in front of him, a breeze picked up her dress high over her head - revealing her anatomy to the startled American.

To break the embarrassment, the American graciously tipped his hat and politely remarked: "It is a bit airy this morning isn't it?"

"Of course it is!" exclaimed the English girl. "What the 'ell did you expect -- chrysanthemums?"

"Not much," said the other. "But yours seems a decent sort of girl; what's wrong with her?"

"Nothing much," replied the first, "but between the smog and the grog and the fog, I seem to have picked up an aunt of mine."

BETTER WAYS TO BETTER DAYS

Americans who love their country and are genuninely opposed to communism and socialism have the facts on their side. But the truth can be unpopular and unwelcome, and up to now we have been unable to win many arguments. People who want to change our laws by demonstration or to interpret the law in a way that will permit them to do whatever they please belong on the opposite side from those who cherish freedom.

Left and right of center will have more meaning when we begin thinking of left or right of the "average." The debate between people with the burdensome lable "Conservative" and those who have preempted the very fine title "Liberal" is going badly for freedom. The much-sought-after and highly regarded title, "Moderate," is only a new version of "Middle - of - the-road." Moderates, after all, are those who cannot think through the issues accurately and lack the courage of their convictions to take a stand. Trying to listen to public opinion, they weave back and forth, with little depth and weight.

The lines would be more easily discernible if drawn between those showing love of country who could be called "Constructives," and those who have permitted their thinking to be twisted to such an extent that they are tolerant of communism and crime.

Many ask, "Is there real danger that we will lose our liberty or that the nation will surrender its sovereignty?" If the answer is affirmative, surely everyone must begin doing all that he can to safeguard our future. H.L.H.

HOME TOWN, U.S.A. (AP) -- "Housewives are such utter fools," announced Trellis Mae Peeble, America's most averse age wife.

When Trellis Mae made a flat statement like that, Wilbur, her husband, knew better than to contradict her. He also knew better than to agree with her outright.

"Uh-uhm," he said noncommittaly.

"Aren't you ever interested in why I think all housewives are utter fools?" demanded Trellis Mae.

"Uh huh," replied her spouse, looking at her warily.

"The reason I think we housewives are such utter fools is that we are all so disorganized -- totally disorganized."

"Oh, I wouldn't say that about you," said Wilbur, glancing around the kitchen. "The place looks pretty spic and span -- or will, anyways, after I finish drying the dishes and you take out the garbage."

"I am not talking about neatness, I am talking about being disorganized."

"Well, if housewives are disorganized," asked Wilbur, still at sea, "just who is organized?"

"The subway workers and bus drivers of New York City -- that's who!" exclaimed Trellis Mae.

"I know you're not going to leave me just standing here wondering," murmured Wilbur. "What's it all about?"

"Well, those transit workers have got a great big union for all. And I just read in the paper they signed a new contract that will get them more money and has new fringers on their old fringe benefits."

"Such as?"

"Well, the big thing is that they can retire at half-pay after spending only 20 years in a nice warm comfortable subway, where they have chances to meet all kinds of interesting people."

"And -- ?"

"And I don't think it's fair."

"Fair to whom?"

"Fair to us housewives. Subway drivers have it easy compared to housewives.

"And it's all because we're so disorganized. We should have a great big union, too, and win equal rights with the subway drivers. Then we could retire in 20 years at half-pay."

"The idea has some merit," said Wilbur, after a thoughtful pause. "Let me see now. We've been married 19 years, and I'm paying you nothing a week. That means in another year I could retire you at half of that."

"Yes, but -."

"Then, of course, I'd have the problem of breaking in a younger wife on the job," continued her husband.

"A what?"

"A younger wife."

"Oh, Wilbur, you wouldn't, would you?" said Trellis Mae.

"You just form that big union of wives and see what happens," said Wilbur, and as he bent and kissed her triumphantly he knew that this was one subject Trellis Mae would never bring up again in his lifetime.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY:

FBI "Bug" picked up columnist quizzing black; this column was checking on Black's link with gambling syndicate; secret summary of interview rushed to FBI field offices.

WASHINGTON -- The secret microphones planted by the FBI in Fred Black's hotel suite not only picked up the private conversations of congressional leaders, white house aides and business tycoons, but also caught newspaper columnists in quest of information. We happen to be the columnists whose efforts were recorded on hidden FBI tapes.

We were investigating the same rumors as the justice department namely that Black was the gambling syndicate's front man in Washington. Unknown to us, however, the FBI was tuned in on our investigation.

One of the FBI's secret summaries states: "The following communication pertains to information obtained by the informant (meaning the FBI bug) concerning a visit to Black by columnist Jack Anderson, associate of Drew Pearson, on 4-5-63 at approximately 6 p.m."

In response to questions, according to the transcript, Black admitted that a grand jury was investigating him "find some conflict of interest or maybe I was paying off somebody."

"Did they bring Levinson before the grand jury?" asked Anderson.

"Ed Levinson?"

The FBI noted that "this question seemed to surprise Black."

"I never had any business dealings with him," said Black.

"They're saying you're representing him."

JUST GOOD FRIENDS?

"Well that isn't true, I emphatically deny it. He's one of the best friends I have over a period of two years. . ."

Black acknowledged that his association with Levinson had aroused the suspicions of the FBI which, Black claimed, watched him when he visited Las Vegas.

"They're watching everyone with those people," said Anderson. "They think that you're some kind of a bag man or something for them."

"I represent legitimate companies," protested Black.

"Have you ever talked to any senators or congressmen or anybody about any of their problems out there?"

"No," said Black, "the only thing I did was for Jimmy Morrison (then congressman from Louisiana). He had charge of getting a bunch of congressional secretaries and people like that on a summer trip when congress was over. Through Cliff Jones, who owns the Thunderbird, I arranged for them to headquarter at the Thunderbird. .."

"They told me that you represented Levinson," Anderson persisted.

"Jack," pleaded Black, "some day when Eddie comes here for dinner or something, I want you to meet him. He's a little hard to describe. I know his whole background. He was probably the biggest bookmaker Detroit ever had. I know he was the biggest gambler Miami ever had. Then he went to Las Vegas. He came under the granddaddy law; it excused him for anything he ever did as long as he stayed working in Nevada. He told us all these things."

Anderson, referring again to the justice department's investigation, contended: "They aren't going to that extent because they saw you in his (Levinson's) company. They have to be convinced of more than that. What they told me, my informant told me, they think they got something."

Immediately after Anderson's departure, according to the transcript, Black called in John Cye Cheasty, a private eye, and reported the results of the interview.

BEWARE OF PEARSON!

"The justice department told him (Anderson) they consider me a liaison man and bag man for Las Vegas, the gamblers in Las Vegas," said Black.

"Pearson could murder you," warned Cheasty.

"No, he couldn't murder me."

"He could give you bad publicity."

Thinking it over, Black growled: "They wanted him to blast me in the paper."

"They wanted to plant a story," agreed Cheasty. "I can't understand why they gave that to Anderson. That, to me is dirty pool."

"I think this comes from Bobby Kennedy (then attorney general," said Black, and he cussed out Kennedy bitterly.

Shortly after the tapes were transcribed, the FBI sent an urgent summary by teletype to the Las Vegas and Los Angeles field offices. The message was marked "June," a code word for "secret."

"(Black) said he was going to tell Levinson about the information received from Anderson," concluded the teletype, then added: "Las Vegas and Los Angeles be alert for information pertaining to Black's statement that he would furnish information from Anderson to Levinson."

Once the FBI sets up its listening devices, apparently, there's no telling whose conversations might be overheard.

Note: Judge William Jones has broken all precedents by ordering the FBI to furnish him with all its records in the Black case. Under protest, J. Edgar Hoover has turned over the full file; but he is still pleading with the court not to release everything to Black's attorneys. Judge Jones has angrily ordered an investigation meanwhile, into how we got hold of the still-secret transcripts.

ONCE BOTTLES WERE CORKERS

NEW YORK (AP) — Today's wine and beverage bottles have a better standing than their predecessors of 300 years ago.

The Glass Container Manufacturers Institute notes that in the 17th Century wine and "soda water" bottles had rounded bottoms.

Early wine and soda bottles were sealed with corks that had to be kept moist to maintain the seal. The bottles were thus purposely designed so they couldn't stand up, necessitating horizontal storage to keep the corks wet.

Flat-bottom bottles came into popularity in the 19th Century with the development of crown caps.

Our little devil has returned from his vacation and this prognosticator gladly hands over his magic wands. . .mystic pipes. . . and whatever he's tried to use in calling basketball games. . .

Exiting with a 25 of 35 record for. . . 71 per cent clip. . .We're glad to get out of it. . . .

Here he is. . .our little devil. . .

"Goood evennning" here are tonight's calls:

Poplar Bluff at Dexter -- Let's see. . . The Mules are small and the Bearcats are coming. . .Some ball game this should be. . .Dexter has the home floor advantage. . .but the Mules seem to have a real attack in their 5-9 average. . . We'll go on a long shot and say. . .Dexter by five, Dexter 71, Poplar Bluff 66.

Cape Girardeau Central at Perryville -- How about this. . . another toughie in the SEMO conference. . . Central might make this trip for nothing and we think the Pirates have what it takes to shoot down the Tigers. Perryville 63, Cape Central 58.

Jackson at Kennett -- Maybe the Indians of Kennett have gotten over their recent sickness... If not they'll give it to the visiting tribute tonight. Kennett 82, Jackson 69.

Bloomfield at Advance -- Are the Wildcats on the down grade... Or. . .is Puxico beginning to jell. . .we'll know after tonight's encounter. . .as the Hornets are a comparable team with the Indians. Bloomfield. . .We'll go with you again. Bloomfield 51, Advance 48.

Portageville at Parma -- The Bulldogs are the dark horses in New Madrid county. . .they looked as well as any team can when we have seen them. . .They'll be up for this match for former Parma coach Dale Harrison. . who is now their coach. Portageville 78, Parma 61.

Oran at St. Henry -- No need to go into detail. . .is there? Oran 99, St. Henry 71.

Richland at Bell City -- We understand that Willie Jones is back with the Rebels. . .and that should mean an extra 18 rebounds and 15 points. . .enough for the Rebels to add to the scoring of Williamson, Fowler and Brown. . .Brown. Richland 84, Bell City 61.

New Madrid at Morehouse -- Maybe the long vacation has helped both ball clubs. . . It'll be the Indians over the Tigers. New Madrid 75, Morehouse 56.

East Prairie at Chaffee -- This should be a real "barn burner" or gym burner. . .or whatever. . .It'll be one heck of a game. . .We'll have to go with the Red Devils... Chaffee 65, East Prairie 54.

Delta C-6 at Hayti North-- Another spicy game. . .Coach Norman Nelson's crew has had a rest. . .and might be hungry for a victory. Delta's Chargers finished off a week of basketball with third place at Senath-Hornersville last week. Let's go with Hayti. . .Hayti North 71, Delta C-7 67. Neelyville, Caruthersville, Bernie, Patton, Malden, Cooter Fisk and Illmo-Scott City will win in other action.

Scott Central at Delta -- We almost forgot about this match . . .Delta seems to be the only team to have placed close to the Braves in the past week. . .They'll have the home court advantage... but they'll go down to defeat. Scott Central has balance. . .and most important a good coach. Scott Central 70, Delta 66.

Warn South

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — The North is loaded with all-star football players, but the South has been warned to beware in particular in Saturday's Senior Bowl game of defensive back Dick Anderson of Colorado.

"You've never seen anything like him," South Coach Hank Stram of the Kansas City Chiefs was warned Thursday night by Georgia Coach Vince Dooley, who watched Anderson beat his South team in the Blue-Gray game a week ago.

"He's got more moves than anything I've ever seen," Dooley told Stram after watching Anderson return punts for 62 and 69 yards in a winning comeback.

Stram, coaching his first all-star team after sending the Chiefs into the Super Bowl a year ago, said he has been impressed by all of the players in the game which starts at 2 p.m. EST and will be televised nationally by NBC.

The South will be counting on the passing of Florida State's Kim Hammond and Tennessee's Dewey Warren to carry Dixie to victory and snap the region out of a holiday slump in which it has won but one of nine bowl and all-star games.

The North is counting on the passing of Paul Toscano of Wyoming and John Schneider of Toledo to carry it to the Yankees' second straight victory.

The North will be out to narrow the series margin in the 19th annual game in which the South takes a 11-6-1 edge. A capacity crowd of more than 40,000 is expected.

Bears Flatten Indians

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Springfield Bears ran over an incredibly cold Cape Girardeau team 82-44 and the Warrensburg Mules downed the Rolla Miners 76-67 in MIAA basketball games Thursday night.

The Bears, 3-0 in the league and 7-2 for the season, have won their last 24 MIAA games. They are fifth-ranked in the nation among small colleges. Cape is 1-4 and 4-3.

The game started fairly evenly and the Bears had a 13-10 lead when Cape lost its touch completely. Springfield made the next 18 points and had a 33-12 halftime lead. The Indians sank only 6 of 33 field shots for 18 per cent in that period. They finished with 27 per cent. The Bears shot 37 per cent.

Springfield ran the score up to 64-21 before putting in the second team with 6:33 left. Lou Shepherd and Chuck Williams each hit 17 points for the Bears. Dan May, with 15, was the only Indian in double figures.

Rolla outshot the Mules from the field 56 per cent to 39 per cent, and outrebounded them 56-49, but Warrensburg sank 24 of 38 free throws for the victory.

Sylvester Mitchell scored 23 points for the Mules, passing the 1,000-point mark for his college career. Randy Bessell led Cape with 17.

Tonight's games include: Washburn at Rockhurst, William Jewell at Westminister, Missouri Valley at Drury, Graceland at Culver-Stockton, Tarkio at Central Methodist.

Johnson, LeGrand Pace Oran Attack

ORAN--Changing his offensive pattern to get a better out front attack, Coach Gene Bess' Oran Eagles got just that and its 15th basketball win of the season as they whipped past powerful Notre Dame of Cape Girardeau, 76-66 last night.

With the changing of the pattern of which he moved star forward Fred Johnson to the key position at the top of the free throw cirlce, the six foot right hander bombed in 20 points and made the difference. The Eagles pasted third ranked Notre Dame after the Bulldogs' junior varsity team came from behind to overhaul the Eagles' junior varsity 46-33.

Oran got a 20-point performance from sophomore Rodney LeGrand, who dropped in the majority of his points at the charity line, where he hit four straight in the final period to cinch the game.

The contest was much closer than the score indicates. Notre Dame pulled to within two points with 30 seconds remaining but desperation fouls forced the Eagles to the charity line, where they notched six points in the final 30 seconds.

Oran's push almost ended as the Notre Dame unit opened up from out court in the second half and ripped in baskets from the 20-foot range. Oran spent most of its time at the charity line in the first half. There it connected on 20 of 23 attempts.

All-stater Greg Flaker of the Bulldogs kept the nets warm all night netting 19 points in the first half and ending the game with 27, the majority on free throws. The ace - righthander drew a cold hand from the field.

Notre Dame, playing with its star forward, Dave Halter, for the first time in a pair of weeks got 12 points from the 6-3 star and 14 rebounds.

Oran took 67 shots from the field and connected on 44 per cent of them. Notre Dame hit at a 52 per cent clip but took only 52 field shots.

Both teams found themselves in foul trouble in the first half. Oran quickly overcame that problem. It drew only one personal in the third period and four in the fourth after drawing 13 in the first half.

Notre Dame stayed in the game in the first half due mostly to its free throw accuracy. The Bulldogs hit only eight field shots in the first half but had to open up from out-court in the second half. They ripped in seven the third period.

Coach Bess felt that his team hustled better and moved better on defense than it had all season and said he was well satisfied with his offensive change.

Don Evans, a six-foot sophomore, grabbed 13 of the 41 rebounds of the Eagles to lead in that department.

Okla. City Upset., Bradley Wins In MVC

Princeton's Chris Thomforde is thinking about being a missionary, maybe in a big city, he says. Lou Rossini wishes he'd find some nice, small out-of-the way place where NYU is never likely to play basketball.

After a fairly erratic first half Thursday night, Thomforde came on strong to lead the Tigers to a 78-62 triumph over Rossini's Violets and make Princeton's return to Madison Square Garden after a three-year absence a happy one.

Thomforde, a rangy blond, said he is seriously considering a career as a missionary and probably in a large town, where he says people and their problems are. But Thursday, his 21 points and 10 rebounds made more than enough problems to last NYU for a while.

Eighth-ranked Oklahoma City, the only member of the Top Ten that played Thursday night, lost to Nevada Southern 96-92 in Las Vegas. The setback was the Chiefs' first of the season after eight victories. NSU is 9-3.

Nevada Southern scored eight straight points in the final minute of play after trailing 90-88. Curtis Watson stole the ball from OCU's Ron Koper to tie the game and seconds later Watson came up with another steal and the go-ahead basket.

Oklahoma City overcame a 47-42 halftime deficit and led by as much as eight points-- 87-46 with eight minutes to play before Nevada Southern launched its comeback.

Elburt Miller topped the Rebels with 32 points and Don Lyons added 28. Ron Koper was high for the Chiefs with 24.

Long Island University, No. 3 in the small-college rankings, won its 11th straight game, disposing of Seton Hall 53-47. Cliff Culuko scored 21 points for the Blackbirds.

Louisville, getting 18 points from West Unseld and 18 from Jerry King, won its second Missouri Valley Conference game, topping Tulsa 65-59 on the road.

Bradley won its third MVC game, beating Wichita State 104-92 behind Joe Allen's 26 points.

Cincinnati opened its Missouri Valley season with a 61-53 triumph over North Texas State. Rick Roberson scored 14 points and pulled in 23 rebounds.

In other games, the Citadel beat Loyola of New Orleans 61-59, St. John's whipped Syracuse 79-58, Rutgers beat Dartmouth 79-52 and Utah State beat American U. 94-78.

Eight To Battle For Tri-State Championship

CHARLESTON -- Eight schools will begin battling tomorrow at 1 p.m. for the team trophy of the second annual Tri-State wrestling tournament.

Three rounds will be played with opening round starting at one p.m., followed by a semi-final round at 3:30 p.m. and the finals at 7 p.m.

Five Missouri teams along with three out-state squads will battle. Charleston, Sikeston, Jackson, East Prairie and Cape Girardeau Central will be the Missouri entries. Murphysboro and Carbondale from Illinois are entered along with Trigg County, Ky., high school.

Rebels Roll Up 12th Win

ARBYRD -- Southland, behind the 24-point production of guard Jerry Smith rolled up its 12th win of the basketball season against two defeats here last night as it turned back Campbell 79-45 after the junior Rebels whipped past the visitors 53-35.

Smith with double figure help from three teammates, Brent Davis' 16, Ronnie Cude's 12 and Marlin Wells' 11 opened up a 22-15 first period lead and surged ahead into the winners circle unthreatened.

Cude's 25 rebounds played a big part in the Rebs win as the 6-3 forward of the Southland quintet kept the Camels offensive tries to generally one as he whipped the ball off the boards for quick fast breaks.

Southland rolled into a 43-27 half lead and sailed into the winners circle before the home crowd.

Glenn Wilson paced Campbell scorers with 17 points.

"THE PACE SETTER BANK"

Hearnes Urged to Include Public Defender Measure

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — Among the proposals Gov. Warren E. Hearnes is being urged to include in his call to the Missouri Legislature for a special session is a public defender bill.

It would establish 21 public defender districts in the state. About seven would operate full-time, with salaried defenders, assistants and other staff members. In the other areas — with 100,000 or less population each — it is proposed that a commission composed of members of the Missouri Bar and nonlawyer members be set up to control assignments for legal cases.

The proposed bill is sponsored by the Missouri Bar, according to its executive director, Wade F. Baker, and State Sen. Richard F. Southern, D.Monroe City.

It is similar to a measure sponsored at the legislature's last session by Rep. Harold Volkmer, D.Hannibal. It died in the Senate when the legislature adjourned.

Director Baker says: "Since the United State Supreme Court has provided for legal assistance to be made available to indigents accused of crimes, it is the bar's position that this is now a responsibility of society and not just the responsibility of the legal profession."

In each of the 21 districts the defender's office would be controlled by a commission of five persons, with the lawyer members assigned or appointed by the Missouri Bar Association and the nonlawyer member appointed by the governor. Commission members would receive expenses but no salary.

The cases covered by the proposed law would be felony cases, misdemeanors and juvenile cases, but municipal cases would not be included.

The sponsors say the work load of appointed attorneys has increased greatly as a result of the U.S. Supreme Court's so-called "Miranda decision," making it mandatory that every accused person be notified upon his arrest as to his constitutional rights, the charge against him and his right to an attorney — at the state's expense — if he is unable to afford an attorney himself.

It has been traditional in Missouri to have court-appointed attorneys serve without fees, the sponsors explain. They say the expenses of these attorneys are increasing because of the introduction of new defense tactics in the past three years.

Hemispheric Travel Exemption Clarified

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's exemption of Western Hemisphere nations from his appeal that Americans not travel abroad is based on solid economic foundations, say key administration sources.

They said present administration thinking is to continue that exemption when and if restrictive measures— such as a head tax or a tax based on the number of days spent abroad— are adopted to discourage overseas travel.

One source said the basic rationale behind the exemption is that money spent by U.S. tourists in other Western Hemisphere countries eventually returns in one form or another— increased travel to the United States or export sales and services, for example.

In outlining on New Year's Day his program to stem the U.S. dollar drain, President Johnson appealed for Americans to "defer for the next two years all nonessential travel outside the Western Hemisphere."

He added: "Im asking the secretary of the Treasury to explore with appropriate congressional committees legislation to help achieve this objective."

One key official cited this sentence as proof that if more restrictions on travel are adopted the Western Hemisphere will continue to enjoy its exemption.

Although the administration has not legally defined the Western Hemisphere for purposes of the President's appeal, officials said Bermuda, the Bahamas and the West Indies generally are considered part of the hemisphere.

In fact, one source said another factor in the exemption is that the departure of American tourists from some of these resort areas could severely hurt the economies there.

The large number of tourists and daily travelers between the United States and Canada and the United States and Mexico was cited as another reason for the exemption. One source said the headaches in administering a travel ban with Canada and Mexico would be phenomenal if not impossible.

One of the major reasons the United States has traditionally enjoyed a favorable trade balance has been its extensive export trade with both border neighbors. Canada and Mexico are the best U.S. export customers and this country is the best customer for their exports.

Way to Unclog Pipeline to Congress Puzzles Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP) — As President Johnson prepares for the battles of 1968 one problem he must ponder beside the banks of the Pedernales is the short-circuit in his dealings with Congress.

Ironic, too, for legend has it that Lyndon B. Johnson is another Merlin the Magician in knowing which Capitol Hill buttons to push and how hard to push them.

But if he is to live up to his reputation in this critical year — and it is probably impossible — Johnson will have to find his missing wizard's wand.

Last year the President not only failed to bewitch Congress but found his biggest troublemakers in the ranks of his own party on Capitol Hill . . . Sen. J. W. Fulbright, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills and Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy -all are Democrats who promise to haunt Johnson in the paramount concerns of 1968— Vietnam, fiscal policy and politics.

There is no magic formula for dealing with such differences. And the breaks in Johnson's relationships with Fulbright and McCarthy appear beyond repair.

But in the broader range of communications, there were persistent mutterings last year, particularly from the House, that liaison between the White House and Capitol had become frayed or even severed.

For Johnson the need for a smooth White House-Capitol operation is more urgent this year. He will have to run with Congress' record this election year.

The late President John F. Kennedy inaugurated the White House-Capitol liaison staff and installed Lawrence F. O'Brien as its Machiavelli.

It can be a tedius craft, keeping the pipelines open between Congress and the executive department.

It involves plotting legislative strategy, dawn-to-dusk patroling of Capitol hallways and repeated telephone calls to size up sentiment or coax it in another direction, knowing the key men on vital issues and what they want.

Under O'Brien the craft became a fine art.

Last year, almost two years after Johnson gave O'Brien the additional job of postmaster general, the muttering started.

There were complaints of bad timing on legislation, faulty efforts to sample sentiment, unanswered telephone calls, lack of aggressiveness and so on.

Spray-Painting Leather, Plastic Requires Caution

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Agnes can purchase a commercial product that is made especially for spray-painting leather, vinyl and plastic furniture. Be sure you get the right one as there is one for regular fabrics, too. I used it on a large footstool and was quite proud of the result. Most paint, hardware or discount stores sell this.

I do hope Polly's Pointers keep going forever as they are so helpful in keeping house.—LUCILLE.

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Agnes that several years ago I painted the leather seats in my 1939 car Chinese red. I used a rubber-base paint and the result was a very fine job. First I washed the seats with warm water and soap. When dry, I dabbed all the cracks in the leather with paint and let dry. Then the seats were completely painted and allowed to dry for two days. I used them for four years and they looked good when I traded the car in.

(Polly's note—This sounds logical from experiences we have had with such paint, but do experiment first to get reaction.)

One lady was having trouble with streaks and smears on her windows after washing. NEVER wash windows when the sun is shining on them, but always when they are in the shade. She may be living in an area where there might be a commercial plant emitting greasy smoke which clings to windows and causes smears. In this event, use a lukewarm detergent-water solution and then rinse with the garden hose. After they are dry, apply your regular window cleaner, use paper towels for wiping and I feel sure you will be satisfied with the result.—JO

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—Does anyone know of a sleek, easy way to clean wood-finished kitchen cupboards and doors without smearing them? All the detergents and household cleaners I have used make them streaked looking. —MRS. C. V. O.

DEAR POLLY—After a pencil becomes too short to sharpen or use comfortably, it is good for use in compasses used for drawing circles.

I plan to build a home when I become older, so when I see an interesting house plan in a magazine or newspaper, I cut it out and save it. By the time I am old enough to build, I will have a nice collection.—MARK

DEAR READERS—Mark's last Pointer is a good suggestion for all who hope to build a house, even though it may be well into the future. Frequent reviewing of the clippings will result in discarding some as time goes on and one develops a definite taste pattern. Time, money and disappointment may be saved if we know what we really want and like.—POLLY

TV Series to Film Scientific Project

NEW YORK (AP) — The usual scientific expedition sets forth on a mission with a photographer— sometimes a part-time photographer— to get whatever pictures he can without interfering with work in progress. The resulting record is strictly a by-product.

But in the making of "Sharks," an hour-long television program which is the first of a dozen or so undersea programs, the photographer is the important man of the project.

The series is an account of the work of Jacques-Yves Cousteau, explorer of the deep, scientist, inventor of the aqualung and writer. The series will be shown on ABC, the the first will be broadcast next Monday night.

"The expedition was planned primarily to make the series— and was paid for by the television series," said its chief cameraman, Philippe Cousteau, 26-year-old son of the leader. "As far as I know it is the first time television has financed a scientific project. And it is the first time, in my experience, that the photographer was not considered a sort of necessary nuisance.

The making of the series will take five years— it started last February— and will explore all sorts of subjects from ocean floor treasure hunts to underwater agriculture. Most of the work is done from the ship Calypso, an old American minesweeper converted into an ocean-going laboratory.

Young Cousteau, an expert diver and a recognized specialist in undersea photography, participated with his father and a crew of 30 expert divers and scientists filming and observing sharks in the Red Sea, Indian Ocean and Gulf of Aden— and was very relieved when the assignment was safely over.

Sharks, he said, are really as dangerous and unpredictable as they are reputed to be.

"After a while, we learned to feel the atmosphere— to know when it seemed safe to go out of our cage to work. And other times when it was not safe," he said. "But I think it was good that we finished without trouble because I think perhaps we were getting overconfident."

In the course of filming the shark program, they experimented with various repellents and devices to protect victims from the ferocious fish. A frightening but rewarding experience was filming the terrifying sight of a shark "feeding frenzy," when the creature tore into wounded fish, even other sharks.

Philippe Cousteau, who attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology for awhile, was in the United States briefly en route to Baja California to start filming another program in the series, this one about gray whales who go to one lagoon on the Pacific Coast to have their young— and teach them how to swim.

McCarthy Longs for Kennedy Support

WASHINGTON (AP — Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy believes a word of support from a Kennedy — almost any Kennedy— would be a big help to his challenge to President Johnson in several presidential primaries.

McCarthy is known to have voiced dissatisfaction because no such words have been forthcoming from either Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D.N.Y., or Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D.Mass.

Like the Minnesota Democrat, both Senators Kennedy have been critical of Johnson's policy in the Vietnam war. But neither has done anything to align himself politically with McCarthy on that issue.

Sources familiar with McCarthy's view said he feels the two Kennedys are perhaps the only congressional colleagues whose support would bolster his campaign, particularly in the New Hampshire and Massachusetts primaries.

Other men who would seem to be likely allies also have been silent. But many of them are running for re-election next year— men like Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D.Ark., and Wayne Morse, D.Ore.

McCarthy, it was said, understands their position, and feels that their endorsement would be unlikely to have much impact anyhow.

The Minnesota senator also is known to be concerned about building momentum for his campaign. "You can't just fade away," he remarked to one visitor. This is believed to be a key factor in his decision to enter the year's opening primary, the New Hampshire race on March 12.

To campaign there, he dropped a planned trip to Vietnam this winter. Candidate tours of the war zone are being overdone, he feels.

On that point, McCarthy cites the experience of Michigan Gov. George Romney, a Republican candidate for the presidency, who harvested adverse publicity during a year-end trip to Vietnam.

The New Hampshire campaign offers McCarthy an opportunity to get his presidential challenge moving, although he acknowledges it will be a very tough race.

1-Cent Stamp Demand to Rise Sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Post Office Department, anticipating a heavy demand for one-cent stamps when the cost of mailing a letter jumps to six cents Sunday, says it has 1.4 billion penny stamps on hand to help Americans use up their five-cent stamps.

The Post Office began stockpiling one-cent stamps last September when Congress started considering the department's proposal to hike the cost of mailing a letter from five to six cents— the third postal-rate increase in 10 years.

The department also has been working around the clock producing six-cent stamps— all bearing the profile of former President Franklin D. Roosevelt. It has about four billion of these.

But the early demand is expected to be for penny stamps since there probably will be lots of fives still around when the rates go up Sunday.

Most of the 1.4 billion one-cent stamps— green and bearing a picture of Andrew Jackson— are stored in an auditorium at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in Washington. The department also has a few smaller stockpiles strategically located in five other cities: San Francisco, Dallas, Cincinnati, Chicago and New York.

The Post Office's Bureau of Facilities estimates the department will need about two billion one-cent stamps to meet the needs of customers when the postal hike takes effect. To meet the demand, a spokesman said, government printers are "working 24 hours a day, shipping seven days a week— and we don't anticipate any shortages."

The Post Office also is issuing a new one-cent stamp Jan. 12 with a picture of Thomas Jefferson on it.

Six cents' postage will be required on letters postmarked Jan. 7. Letters postmarked later and bearing only five cents postage will not be returned to the sender, but will be forwarded to the addressee— possibly accompanied by a request for one-cent postage due.

Postal officials were not certain whether all letters carriers will demand the penny postage due on all letters postmarked Sunday and bearing only five cents postage. One official suggested it might cost the Post Office more than it will receive just to collect the penny due on all letters.

Here are the new rates:

First-class letters will go up from 5 to 6 cents an ounce; airmail letters from 8 to 10 cents an ounce; postal cards from 4 to 5 cents each; airmail cards from 6 to 8 cents each.

Second-class mail rates— mostly newspapers and magazines— will be increased about 24 per cent. Bulk third-class mail— mostly advertising circulars— will go up 34 per cent.

The increases will yield about $900 million a year in additional revenue.

'Parents Generally Right,' College Students Discover

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)

If a four-year study of Stanford and University of California students is correct, this student generation does a great deal of worrying.

A thousand seniors at the two schools were questioned on how often they have felt depressed in the past few years. Half the senior men and two-thirds the senior women reported periods of depression as occurring an astounding "few times a week" to "a few times a month."

Something around three-fourths of the students said that in their senior year they had felt physically out of sorts between once and five times a month on the average.

To most, "old age," meaning the years after 50, looked pretty bleak. Between a quarter and a third of the senior students said they believed that the people are happiest during their first six years of life and a third thought the happiest time was from 22 to 25. Only one out of seven chose the years after 36. Less than 3 per cent opted for any time after 50.

Most of the senior students questioned seemed to feel they got more out of their associations with other students, than they did from their professors, their studies or their textbooks.

In fact, the survey found evidence that college has less impact on students' intellectual development than on their social attitudes.

Only about one senior student out of seven believed he had "increased intellectual activity and curiosity" as a result of his four years in college. The most often mentioned changes were "more self-confidence, poise and independence and more stability.

The single most meaningful experience of the college years most often checked was "love, marriage or conjugal family."

Between half and two-thirds of the women seniors and 30 to 40 per cent of the senior men thought that close relations with friends of the opposite sex had done a great deal to change them. A third of the men and a third to a half of the women seniors thought that close relations with friends of the same sex had had done much to change them.

By contrast, only about a fourth of the students felt that ideas presented in courses or by teachers had had "much" influence in causing the change that had taken place in their way of thinking or acting in the four years of college. Half thought the teachers and courses had had a "moderate" influence.

Looking at the changes students saw in themselves from another viewpoint, the seniors reported that being away from home had had considerable influence. One of the major factors causing them to change since their freshman year, about half the seniors felt was "confrontation with problems and conflicts in myself."

Apparently most of the students had not turned to their professors for solutions to these problems and conflicts.

Despite this inner conflict, somewhat over half the seniors believed that "in the final analysis, parents generally turn out to be right about things."

This, after all, is quite a compliment for parents in this day and age.

Blacksmith Quits After 59 Years at Vanishing Trade

CARTHAGE, Mo. (AP) — Much of the history made in the largest gray marble quarry in the world was witnessed by a Carthage Marble Corp., blacksmith who retires today after 59 years in the almost forgotten trade.

Ray Erwin, 75, rural Carthage was the guest at an informal party given by his fellow workers during his last day in the machine shop.

The veteran blacksmith commented "You know, I really hate to quit working, but I decided I would quit while I'm still in pretty good physical shape."

Erwin, who was born near Ash Grove, worked the summer of 1908 at the age of 15 as a blacksmith's helper under his father, who had started working at the trade in 1903 at a quarry 18 miles north of Springfield. Later the family moved to Carthage.

"I started working full-time at 10 hours a day, six days a week for $1.25 a day," Erwin said. "My father, the regular blacksmith, drew a salary of $2.50 a day."

"When I started working with the Carthage Marble and Limestone Co. in 1908, the marble was cut with a steam-powered channeling machine," he recalled. "Everything has changed to electricity instead of steam."

Erwin's job for 59 years was sharpening the steel cutters of the channeling machines.

Carthage long has been known as the world's primary source of gray marble. The industry was launched here in 1885 with one quarry. By the turn of the century there were seven. The operations were merged into what is now the Carthage Marble Corp. It also has marble operations near Ash Grove and at Batesville, Ark.

"Most of the marble sold today is for interior use," the blacksmith said. "Large polishing and cutting facilities have been added here for work on over 100 different types of marble, primarily to be used in the interiors of buildings. When I started work we hauled nothing but rough-cut Carthage marble by rail for exterior use."

A primary example of Carthage marble for exterior use can be seen in the Jasper County courthouse in Carthage. The building was constructed in 1895. Carthage marble also was used in construction of the state capitol at Jefferson City.

Erwin also noted early day quarry workers used picks, shovels and horse-drawn wagons to remove dirt and debris covering the three layers of marble. Now crews move thousands of tons more per day with power equipment.

The corporation president, Roy E. Mayes Sr., said "Ray has been a faithful employe here for many years and we hate to see him leave. He has been a close friend of mine and everybody here at the plant."

Before leaving the blacksmith shop, Erwin bent over and picked up a large hammer. He went over to an anvil and stood there looking down.

"You know," he said, "I expect this anvil has been in the shop as long as I have and it hasn't worn much. It will be here for a long time."

His fellow workers say the memory of Erwin's presence will be there just as surely as the rugged anvil which serves as a symbol of more than half a century of honest toil.

Music Hall Change of Pace Works

NEW YORK (AP) — "Music Hall," NBC's weekly Wednesday night variety show, tried something different this week and, as most programs in this series do, it turned out very well. There were three musical acts, each vastly different from the other, and each in turn had many minutes in the spotlight.

First there was Nancy Wilson, an attractive young singer, in an assortment of night-club type songs.

Then there was Victor Borge, who as usual was vastly amusing as he clowned in familiar style around the keyboard and, also as usual, never quite satisfied the audience's desire to hear him play the piano more. And he plays the piano superbly.

Perhaps most impressive of all was the young team of Simon and Garfunkel who sang, for the most part, their own haunting bittersweet ballads.

Only at the very end were the stars together on stage, and then for a few lines of a song. It was all very effective. The settings were handsome and the mood quiet and easy.

Simon and Garfunkel are just one of many young performers who are currently enchanting audiences of all ages. They are two earnest young men who, without any props except Simon's guitar, can climb on any makeshift stage or stand in the center of an elaborate TV set and weave their musical spell.

Peter Noone, whose Herman's Hermits will be seen in a half hour musical documentary next Tuesday night on NBC, remarked recently that although the Beatles are generally credited with opening up the field for young musicians and launching the new sounds and new beats, it was really kicked off by Englishmen inspired by America's Elvis Presley, then an international rage among the teenagers.

"The sound really started as an American sound," said the 20-year-old Noone who is the Herman of the British quartet. Presley even started the mod look— remember his long hair and sideburns? Most of us stuck with instruments like the guitar, drums, bass and piano because we couldn't afford to have somebody like a saxophone player who couldn't sing and play."

Noone was 15 when with some Manchester schoolmates he formed a singing group. They performed in small clubs and gatherings around the English city "trying to pick up a few bob wherever we could."

"Pete Novak and the Heartbeats"— Noone then was Novak — became Herman's Hermits "because we decided to find the most unusual name in the world. What the name did not achieve, one hit record did. Now the boys comprise one of the best known groups, travel the world, play to jammed audiences and, not incidentally, make a lot of money.

Noone and his fellow musicians will be seen in a half-hour television show Tuesday which is made the easy way. A crew and cameras merely photographed Herman and the Hermits at work one night last fall when they were giving a concert for 40,000 at the Ohio State Fair. Then the film was edited to fit the time spot.

"We didn't have to do anything about it," Noone said, "not even fuss about makeup or clothes."

Each town in Spain has a patron saint and on Saint's Day the people join in a fiesta celebration.

Four candidates for the presidency in 1824 resulted in the election being decided by the House of Representatives. Andrew Jackson got the most votes but did not have a plurality and John Quincy Adams was declared the winner by the House vote.

Woodcutter Gives up Fight To Keep Land

ROUND MOUNTAIN, Calif. (AP) — The lonely battle of Virgil Gray vs. the U.S. government apparently is over.

Armed with shotguns and rifles, Gray for two months has held up completion of a $700 million, 900-mile power network feeding electricity from Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River to Southern California.

U.S. marshals and surveyors were run off the 40 acres on which the defiant woodcutter and his family of nine live 250 miles northeast of San Francisco.

Then, with federal officers ready Thursday to invade Gray's cabin en masse and take him into custody, he let his son talk about a compromise.

The decision may have been based mostly on the mumps. Two of Gray's seven children were in bed with that sickness this week. He said, "I don't want to see those little kids hurt."

His wife Jane and their eldest child, Ronald, 20, convinced the 53-year-old Gray that the demands of the federal government supercede his personal property rights.

Rodney Hamblin, deputy U.S. attorney in San Francisco assigned to the case, said Ronald agreed to be the go-between with his father.

Hamblin said the son told him the original offer of $100 an acre for the part of the 40-acre farm needed for the power line right-of-way wasn't good enough, and the path also cuts across "the only good field we have."

Hamblin said "I made him a very liberal offer" this time and asked the son to ask his father to think about it.

Virgil Gray said he probably would give in if the government would provide enough money to give all his children the education Ronald is getting at Shasta College in Redding.

"A man can't do his work, can't get his wood cut, bothered all the time by men from the government," he said.

"I don't want the power line on my land. I don't want the government's money. All I want is to be let alone."

Number Killed In War Rose During Truce

SAIGON (AP) — The number of Americans killed in the Vietnam War increased during Christmas week despite ceasefires proclaimed by both sides, but the number of wounded dropped sharply, the U.S. Command reported today.

South Vietnamese government casualties decreased slightly, the number of enemy killed dropped, but those of other allied forces increased over the totals reported the week before.

The U.S. Command said 185 Americans were killed in action last week, compared with 166 the week before. The number of wounded was 437 last week, compared with 1,361 the previous week.

Of the 437 wounded, the U.S. Command said, 130 did not require hospitalization.

The new totals raised to 15,997 the number of Americans killed in action in the Vietnam war and the number of wounded to 99,742. Another 878 Americans are listed as missing or captured.

More than half the American combat casualties were recorded in 1967: 9,353 killed and 72,209 wounded.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported 227 government troops killed last week, 556 wounded and 63 missing. The previous week 234 were reported killed, 629 wounded and 26 missing.

Other allied forces reported 37 men killed last week and 47 wounded, compared with 20 killed and 34 wounded a week earlier. None was listed as missing.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

Mrs. Hubert Humphrey, wife of the vice president of the United States lives a life of faith. Her devotion to her children extends to all children around the world. She was involved with the problems of the handicapped even before her granddaughter, Vicky, was born a mongoloid. Mrs. Humphrey's mission has been to open hearts and eyes to the needs and love of the mentally retarded. This she has done officially and personally wherever she goes.

Speaking of Vicky she says: "She has taught our family to mean more to each other. I gain strength from my children and grandchildren. In raising a family, those precious moments come along when they say some little thing that makes everything right with the world." The only advice Mrs. Humphrey gives on the handling of the problems of retardation is: "Take first things first one day at a time."

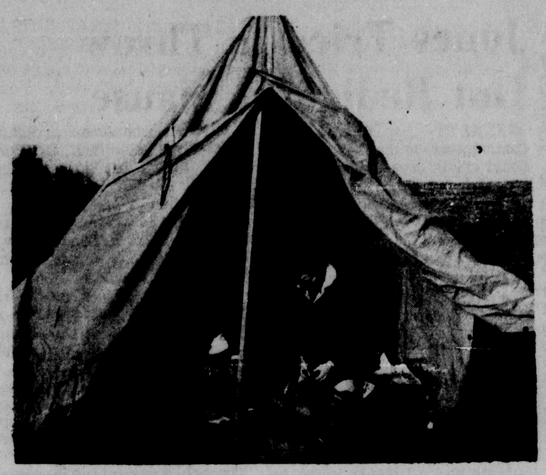
GOD'S EXALTED SON

A WINTER CAMPOUT in sub-freezing weather did not deter Boy Scout John Winders, troop 59, from gathering snow for a snowball fight at a Camporee at the camporee near Wickliffe, Ky.



SETTING UP CAMP at a Boy Scout camporee near Wickliffe, Ky., are Tom Putnam and P. D. Jackson, members of troop 35 in Charleston.

IT WAS HARD SLEDDING for camp trucks as Scoutmaster Adrian Young and Boy Scout Andy Norman, troop 59, put their shoulder to the wheel in getting through the slick snow at an Okeechobee Scout camporee at Wickliffe, Ky.

Radio Evangelist Builds Highly Successful Program

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The choir bursts into "All Hail the Power of Jesus," and the announcer intones:

"From the headquarters city in Springfield, Missouri, U.S.A., across the nation and around the world it's Revivaltime."

And time for the Rev. C. M. Ward to address an estimated 25 million listeners on what he terms the fourth dimension of radio.

"Radio is the three S's," the bespectacled, balding evangelist explained before the show. "Suds, smoke and soap.

"Why not add a fourth S— salvation, which has an element that can be told again and again."

The theme of tonight's show is the poor and their advantages.

"Man is trying to do by legislation what can only be done by salvation," Ward asserts, and a subdued "amen" rises from the audience in the Assemblies of God studio.

"This giveaway is reaching serious proportions. How much money did it take to make a Tom Jefferson or an Abraham Lincoln? They used poverty."

The word goes out to Anchorage, Alaska; Boone, Iowa; Butte, Mont.; Nickerie, Surinam, and Nuku'alofa, Tonga — through 523 radio stations.

Ward's voice rises and falls with practiced ease, giving the effect of a spontaneous, unrehearsed sermon even to those in the studio who can see him reading from a script.

He is careful to speak in simple terms which can be understood by foreign audiences.

"I must avoid anything obscure or American similes," he said. "I avoid the ugly American."

The evangelist also is a practical man who has no illusions about high-brow messages.

"We have a million a year budget, so when the plate is passed we want the money to come in," he stated bluntly.

"Every week's message contains the same ingredients. It's like a Betty Crocker cake mix."

Ward, who began the Revivaltime program in 1952, comes by his calling naturally. Both his mother and father were evangelists and met while kneeling side by side at a prayer meeting in Winnipeg, Canada.

Each program is carried live by the American Broadcasting Co. and also is recorded twice, once for Canadian audiences and once for Americans and overseas.

The tapes are edited for special audiences. Armed Forces Radio, for instance, requires them to cut out appeals for offerings.

The Revivaltime show receives an average of 11,000 letters a month, most of them handwritten. Many of the letters request prayer books, inspirational materials or Christmas cards offered on the program.

Ward's staff has indexed his more than 700 sermons by subject today, and listeners with problems receive a copy of the appropriate sermon.

Small Italian Town Blossoms 4 Weeks a Year

SAN GIOVANNI in FIORE, Italy (AP) — This town of poverty whose name means St. John in Flower has blossomed for four fleeting weeks and receded again into its loneliness.

Eight thousand of its menfolk, almost every able-bodied male of the 20,000 population, have headed north again to their year-long jobs in Germany, France, Switzerland and the factories of North Italy.

Those who remain behind to wait through the dragging months until 1968's Christmas and New Year workers' home leave are the women, the children and the old.

St. John blooms only in those four weeks each year when the menfolk come back home.

Couples had to queue before the parish church over this Christmas and New Year holiday for 100 marriages crowded into the brief homecoming for young migrant men who had saved enough to wed the girls who waited.

Then they left the new brides to learn the town's old lesson of patience and loneliness until next year.

Homecoming fathers this year fondled 400 babies born last fall that they had never seen before.

It has been that way as long as the oldest resident can remember, because there is no work here.

The only change is that in the past year or two some of the migrant workers started taking their wives north with them.

"They found out that a lot of what they earn goes for meals and laundry," explained Don Giuseppe Andrieri, 72, the parish priest. "So some of them are taking their women with them."

"If you don't leave, you don't eat," said Biafora Oliverio, 59, who has been the town's busiest midwife for 35 years.

The priest agreed. "The town lives only on the providence of God," he said.

Train Collision Hospitalizes 27

SMETHWICK, England (AP) — Two trains collided at Smethwick in the English Midlands today and a fleet of ambulances took 27 injured persons to hospitals. A British Railways spokesman said no deaths had been reported.

One express was reported to have run into the rear of another near Smethwick's Rolfe Street Station. Wreckage blocked the main Birmingham-Manchester line.

The man who says a barking dog never bites is probably the descendant of pioneers who were scalped by Indians because they didn't pay attention to smoke signals.

Suit Lincoln Wore to Theater Priced $50,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — The frock coat and suit President Abraham Lincoln wore to Ford's Theater the night of his assassination is being sought by the Interior Department for display in the newly restored theater.

The problem is not where to find the garments, but how to match the price their present owner is asking: $50,000.

As reported by the Washington Post, the clothes were given to Alfonso Donn, a White House doorkeeper, by the President's widow, Mary Todd Lincoln. They are presently owned by his granddaughter, Mrs. Marion J. Smith of North Carolina.

Mrs. Smith has offered to sell them to the government for inclusion in the Lincoln museum in Ford's Theater which is scheduled to resume live theatricals Jan. 21.

But so far, the Post reported, the Interior Department is unable either to get authorization to buy the garments or to find a patron to provide the money.

"We feel that these are the most important and meaningful Lincoln effects we could have," said Douglas H. Hubbard, an Interior Department official. "Our fear is that some private collector will buy them unless we are able to negotiate with Mrs. Smith and settle with her soon."

Tighter Reins Sought on Film Censors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Distributors of movies banned in Chicago and restricted in Dallas are asking the Supreme Court to tighten guidelines this year on city film censorship.

The Dallas distributor says bans should be limited to films found obscene under tests already set by the Supreme Court — and contends Dallas' standards are unconstitutionally vague and ambiguous.

The Chicago distributor says that city's appeal procedure is so time-consuming that films can be arbitrarily kept out of theaters "beyond any permissible constitutional limits."

The Chicago firm, Teitel Film Corp., also claims an Illinois court improperly ruled "Rent-A-Girl" and "Body of a Female" obscene on grounds they are calculated to arouse sexual desire.

Teitel argues the Supreme Court already has held that sexual arousal is not a test of obscenity.

The court will hear the Dallas case— and is expected to decide whether to accept the Chicago case— shortly after it reconvenes Jan. 15.

Neither case challenges the constitutionality of film censorship itself. That appeared to be upheld, with restraints, in the court's Freedman vs. Maryland decision in 1965.

But they ask further guidelines on just what an obscene film is and how long a city can keep a questionable picture out of theaters through appeal procedures.

Interstate Circuit, Inc., joined by United Artists Corp., contends Dallas was unconstitutionally vague when it restricted the Brigitte Bardot film "Viva Maria" on grounds of sexual promiscuity.

Teitel says Chicago kept its two films out of theaters 20 months before a state court ever ruled them obscene— and says the appeal procedure might have taken longer.

But the Illinois Supreme Court held Chicago's procedure to be constitutional and ruled both films were obscene.

State Gains 62 New Programs In 10 Years

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Missouri's government has established 62 new programs in the past 10 years — 45 in the last five years — that are financed by general tax money, the Missouri Public Expenditure Survey reported today.

Many of them are the result of increased demand for higher education, more realistic approach to mental disease and the demand that air and water pollution be controlled, the taxpayers' organization said after a study of the new programs.

Frequently the reason is that the federal government has pushed the programs and theatened the states with refusal of federal aid if they do not conform.

There have been 10 such programs in the past decade, the survey said, with three major ones just last year.

They included medical aid to welfare recipients (Medicaid), safety inspection of automobiles, and control of junkyards.

The survey avoided any specific recommendations but did say that costs of new programs should be projected for three to five-year periods instead of just for the one in the immediate future.

IRS Removes Mission From Tax-Exempt Roll

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Holy Land Christian Approach Mission, which solicits nationally for contributions, largely by mail, lost its tax-exempt status as a religious or charitable organization last week.

The mission's collections in a single year have amounted to as much as $1 million.

Donald J. Stadfield, district Internal Revenue Service spokesman, said Wednesday the Kansas City - headquartered mission now must pay taxes on its profits, like any ordinary corporation. It also means, he added, that contributions to the mission may no longer be claimed as income tax deductions by the contributors.

Stadfield declined to specify why the mission's exemption had been dropped. It operates an orphanage and crippled children's hospital at Bethlehem, now in Israeli - controlled Jordan.

There was no comment from mission headquarters. The Rev. Ralph E. Baney, 37, its executive director and general secretary, has been on a trip to Bethlehem and is expected back late this week.

The mission mails an eight-page magazine published 11 times a year to contributors at the price of $1 annually. The publication carries news of the mission's work and appeals for funds. From 350 to 400 Arab children occupy the orphanage. Another 50 or so are in the crippled children's hospital.

Also conducted by the mission is a sponsor-your-own-orphan program, with $10 a month suggested for contributors. Donations also are sought in return for Christmas and Easter cards with Holy Land motifs. The mission conducts tours of the Holy Land for Americans, and solicits funds for the distribution of Christmas baskets to the needy in Bethlehem.

Baney received international attention in 1960 with the claim that he may have found the lost cities of Sodom and Gomorrah while skin diving in the Dead Sea. He later wrote a paperback book titled, "The Search for Sodom and Gomorrah."

Zimmerman Files For Treasurer

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Former State Rep. William T. Zimmerman, R-Warrenton, filed Wednesday for the Republican nomination for state treasurer.

Zimmerman, who spent five terms in the House, lost to Haskell Holman, state auditor, in that race two years ago.

Two Democrats have filed for treasurer— William E. Robinson of Jefferson City, the party committee's state treasurer, and Lewis E. Morris of Jefferson City, a retired Army officer who runs for something every two years.

AUDITED PAID CIRCULATION ABC

One in a series of messages to advertisers

No advertiser can afford expensive guessing. Positive proof of circulation should be demanded. Vague generalities should be discounted. Charts, formulas, and promises are not readers, and can lead your advertising off sales target.

The actual circulation figures...verified count...of this newspaper are available through the report of the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Exactly how many units of your advertising are delivered into the hands of paying customers? How much do they pay to see your advertising? Where and how is this advertising being delivered?

This is the type of circulation information that helps keep your advertising and advertising budget aimed in the right direction. No camouflage, just facts and figures.

Fadeout by Mao's Wife Puzzling

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mao Tse-tung's fourth wife, Chiang Ching, has dropped from public view in Communist China. This, along with other developments, hints that the ferocity of the "Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution" is on the wane.

Mao Tse-tung now is 74. If his grip on the reins of power loosens, and, at the same time, the cultural revolution gradually fades away, it is possible that moderate elements will command more influence, even to the point of making Peking more approachable by other nations.

Just a year ago this month the political upheaval reached its peak of violence in what was called "the January revolution." Revolutionary rebels and teen-age Red Guards were instructed to "seize the power from the handful of party persons in authority who have taken the capitalist road."

The Chinese Communist press is renewing an appeal to Mao's supporters to "wage struggle by reasoning and not by force." Official press comment suggests an effort is being made to restore some order to the educational system, disrupted since August 1966 by the cultural revolution movement which kept youngsters out of schools and turned them against their teachers.

The movement probably will continue in one form or another for some time. But a year and a half has been a long time even for the most fanatic to keep up a full head of steam.

The failure of Mao's wife to appear at public functions could be significant. A Canton newspaper has said that "arduous struggle (in the cultural revolution) has impaired Comrade Chiang Ching's health." But Russian commentators brushed this aside as unlikely.

"Foreign observers," said a Moscow broadcast in Chinese to China last week, "feel that Chiang Ching's illness was due to outside pressure . . . What is interesting is that it was Chou En-lai who disclosed that Chiang Ching was ill."

Premier Chou is credited by some China-watchers with being a voice of moderation in the Mao camp. His conduct of government affairs, by his own account, has been seriously hampered by cultural revolution uproar.

Though holding the upper hand, the Mao faction by its own admission has failed to destroy its enemies. The official press still denounces "China's Khrushchev," but still cannot criticize President Liu Shao-chi by name. The Mao group may lack sufficient strength to call a party congress which could legally remove Liu from the chairmanship of the government.

In propaganda and education, the outcome remains in doubt. The press admits many "renegades" remain in authority and "some have even regained ranking positions."

It would be no surprise, should Mao's influence slip, if the contending sides in the struggle reached some form of compromise.

Chiang Ching's fadeout could mean that some in high places, even in Mao's camp, have had enough of the former actress and her ambitions.

GOP Favors Piling up For Reagan

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan, already a million-dollar-plus fund raiser for the Republican party, is collecting the kind of political IOU's that helped Richard M. Nixon and Barry Goldwater win presidential nominations.

From traditionally Republican Iowa to new GOP country in the Old South, party chairmen beam with delight when they land the California governor for fund-raising dinners. He is one of the biggest draws in Republican history—"the all-time champ," according to Chairman James Halley of the California Republican Central Committee.

Reagan will test his appeal in the heartland of the East—the Establishment of Dewey, Willkie and Eisenhower—on a tour next month of New York, Pennsylvania and Washington, D.C.

The name Reagan to date has meant money to hard-pressed party finance officials in Oregon, Seattle, Houston, Dallas, Des Moines, Milwaukee and Columbia, S.C. Gratitude for similar favors created blocs of loyal national convention delegates for Nixon in 1960 and Goldwater in 1964.

Reagan keeps insisting he is not a candidate and hopes only to head a "favorite son" delegation from California to the 1968 convention.

In answer to questions at a Dec. 19 news conference, Reagan conceded that the backing of conservative Republicans who want him to run for president is "gratifying, there is no question about that."

He added, however: "My position hasn't changed at all. I'm not a candidate."

Nevertheless, the remark by Gov. Tom McCall of Oregon that Reagan is "the hottest political property around" is becoming a favorite saying among Reagan watchers.

In dollar terms, Reagan raised nearly $1.4 million in September and October for depleted GOP coffers, says Tom Reed, a wealthy 33-year-old former appointments secretary who handles the governor's out-of-state political contacts.

National speech-making tours are described by Reagan as "party chores that should be done." He is well aware that such ventures heighten speculation they are fronts for a full-scale campaign for the GOP presidential nomination.

Reed refuses to reveal how much Reagan is paid for appearing at party events on the ground that it's a private matter, but he denies as "absolutely false" a report that Reagan got $15,000 for a Milwaukee speech in September.

All Reagan's appearance fees go into a special trust fund set up within the California Republican party strictly to finance the governor's out-of-state political trips, Reed said.

Reed says he expects the fund to break even for 1967, but if there is a surplus, it will be refunded to states where Reagan has appeared on "a fair and equitable basis" to be determined by Reagan.

Thread to Patch Damaged Heart Believed Found

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Scientists at a New Jersey research firm believe they have discovered a thread that could be used to patch a damaged heart.

The thread was described here by Dr. Leslie K. Gulton, president of Gulton Industries, Inc., of Metuchen, N.J., a pioneer company in the development of polycrystaline piezoelectric material.

The way to make the thread was discovered last week, Gulton told newsmen Thursday.

He said the thread incorporates tiny crystals that transform electrical energy into mechanical energy and may open approaches to solving the problem of building an artificial heart.

It is capable of being woven into "cloth" and thus has several potential applications for mending or replacing damaged hearts.

Town Thrives On Liquor Store Income

JAMESTOWN, N.C. (AP) — They call this quiet Piedmont North Carolina community "the town that laid a golden egg with a legal liquor store."

Jamestown is a tiny place with no police force and only 1,338 residents, but in six years it has received profits of more than $1.5 million from its Alcoholic Beverage Control store.

Says Carl Wester, administrator of the North Carolina ABC system: "I don't know of a retail liquor outlet in America for the size of the town that sells as much liquor. During the past fiscal year the Jamestown store had sales totaling more than $2.5 million."

The store, which has six clerks, is only a stone's throw from the corporate limits of High Point, a dry city with a population of more than 62,000. Twice in recent years High Point, noted for its many furniture plants, has voted against establishing ABC liquor stores.

Wester estimated that 95 per cent of the business at the Jamestown store comes from High Point.

"Let's face it," said one Jamestown merchant, "the store was built to get High Point business."

Mayor Thomas C. Ragsdale said, "The store hasn't caused us any trouble. The funds have enabled us to get some projects that we wouldn't have had otherwise."

The prosperous industrial community has a new $275,000 colonial-style Town Hall, a new fire truck, a $925,000 sewage system and has spent $540,000 for street improvements. In addition, the town has a tax rate of only 63 cents per $100 property valuation.

"If anything the store has put gray hairs in my head because we've had more money to spend," said Town Manager Charles P. Turner.

He recalled that voters approved the establishment of the liquor store by only about 30 votes. When the store opened Dec. 16, 1961, customers were waiting in line in a cold rain. Some had been there for hours. Traffic was tied up for blocks.

William Lawrence, who operates a service station nearby and signed the original petition requesting a liquor referendum, said, "The only complaint I have is that it causes heavy traffic on holidays and cars can't get into my station."

The five-member Town Council, which formerly used a service station as its meeting place, now meets in a luxurious room in the new Town Hall.

The town has an Alcohol Education Center which helps educate the public on the evils of excessive drinking.

Turner said $215,000 has been spent for rehabilitation, education and law enforcement work.

Mayor Ragsdale said that when law enforcement help is needed the town calls on the Guilford County sheriff's department.

The enabling legislative act which authorized the Jamestown liquor referendum specified that 70 per cent of the profits go to Jamestown. The remaining 30 per cent is divided on a per capita basis and goes to Guilford County and other municipalities in the county except Greensboro, which has ABC stores.

Jones Tried to Throw Out Redistrict Clause

KENNETT - Rep. Paul C. Jones, commenting on the present Missouri crisis created by the decision of federal court panel to reject the state's congressional redistricting plan, says he tried to have an amendment prohibiting at-large elections for congress thrown out as not being germain to the bill to which it was attached.

The bill was passed and signed into law on Dec. 15 and is now a major factor in Missouri's knotty redistricting problem.

The amendment prohibiting at-large elections was attached in the U. S. senate to a private bill concerning an immigrant, Jones said.

Missouri's 10th district congressman opposed it on the floor of the house on a point of order, declaring it was not germain to the original bill.

The house passed the measure, however, after adding an amendment of its own which exempted Hawaii and New Mexico from its provision because these two states have been electing congressmen at-large.

The measure then went to conference committee where its final form was achieved.

Without such a law, an at-large election in Missouri this year to choose 10 congressmen would have been a definite possibility in view of the recent federal court panel decision.

Convicts Rally To Support of 7-Year-Old Hemophiliac

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Fred Bettger Jr., 7, has a pair of Lone Ranger sixguns today and his father has $302 to help pay the medical bills from his son's hemophilia— all thanks to the inmates at Colorado State Penitentiary.

The convicts organized a "Freddy Fund" to raise money for the youngster after they learned his family was in financial straits. Contributions came in from all over the state and blood donors also came forward.

The youngster has required 60 pints of blood— at $27.50 apiece — since September according to his father, an unemployed truck driver.

Inmates on the staff of The Chronicle, a semimonthly prison newspaper, added the pair of sixguns, each complete with a "sulver" bullet, when they turned the money over to the family Thursday.

When his major league playing days were over, Frank Chance, famous first baseman, bought the Los Angeles club in the Pacific Coast League and managed it in 1916 and 1917.

Plans to Film Pearl Harbor Movie Delayed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Notes and comments on the Hollywood scene—

Plans to stage the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor with a massive two-nation film production have hit a delay because of the Vietnam war. Filming was supposed to have begun this month on the Japanese portion of "Tora! Tora! Tora!," a monumental undertaking by 20th Century-Fox and the company of famed director Akira Kurosawa.

"But the picture can't be made without the cooperation of the United States Navy," reports Richard Fleischer, who is scheduled to direct the American portion of the film. "The Navy has offered to help, but it can't guarantee the use of ships because of the Vietnam situation.

"We'd be in terrible shape if we started filming with the ships and then had them pulled out for Vietnam. So now the picture is postponed until fall, when the situation might be more stable. The plan is to shoot the American part of the story first, and then follow with the Japanese portion."

"Tora," which means tiger, was the code word used by Japanese pilots to signal the success of their Dec. 7, 1941 mission . . .

Audiences at world's fairs have been dazzled by the use of multiple projections on a single screen.

If You Were the Judge

Sonic Boom Flips Man But He Can't Collect

Grogin was admiring the young ladies as he strolled down the street. While he was unable to break through their ice barrier. The result? The sonic boom flipped the nonplussed girl watcher into the air.

Landing on his noggin, Grogin sued the U.S. government for his injuries.

"It's just not safe to walk on the streets anymore," he complained in court. "If the government is going to send out supersonic planes, they should be made super safe."

"While the government may owe Grogin an apology," reroted a U.S. attorney, "that's all it owes him. The government can't be held responsible if a sonic boom flips pedestrians into the air."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the government pay for the nob on Grogin's noggin?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that the U.S. government cannot be sued without its permission and that such permission is granted in statutes that are enacted. In this case, he concluded, no statute has been passed that would enable a person to collect damages for personal injuries resulting from the sonic boom of an authorized flight of a government-owned airplane.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. (AP)— Bill D. Burlison says he will stay in the race for the 10th congressional District Democratic nomination "no matter where the district lines are drawn."

HAYTI - A 68-year old Hayti resident was shot and killed Tuesday, during a family argument, the highway patrol said.

Dead is Ben Bateman, who allegedly was shot by his daughter, Mrs. Lavada Edwards, 42, of Hayti, officers said.

Mrs. Edwards was arrested for investigation of murder and was lodged in the Pemiscot county Jail at Caruthersville.

Troopers who investigated said they were told that Mrs. Edwards became involved in an argument with her daughter, Jimmie Dean Bateman, 26. When Bateman intervened, officers said, he was shot in the side with a 16-gauge shotgun.

Bateman was pronounced dead on arrival at Pemiscot County Memorial hospital and his body was taken to the German Funeral Home.

Women Pester Man in Elevator, He Is Advised to Take Stairs

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you published a letter from a girl who wanted to know how to defend herself against a man who got fresh in a self-service elevator. I'm a male who would like some similar advice.

I am a middle-aged man with a lovely wife and family. I am not interested in playing around, but the women who work in this building won't leave me alone. I am well-built, have prematurely gray hair and I look a lot like Cary Grant. On three separate occasions in the past six months I have been propositioned in the elevator. The last time, a woman who is at least 10 years older than I am pushed the emergency stop button between floors and said, "Would you like to kiss me?"

If you think I am putting you on, let me assure you, you have never received a more earnest plea for help in your life. Thanks in advance, Ann. -- CLAUSTROPHOBIA.

Dear Claus: I don't know what you have, fella, but apparently you have a lot more than you need. My advice is to take the stairs. Not only would it solve your problem but stair-climbing is good for the ol' ticker, according to the heart specialists.

Dear Ann Landers: Last week our neighbor invited several couples to her home for dinner. She served horseradish with the roast beef and my husband raved over it. He said it was just like the horseradish his mother used to make and he asked her how she fixed it. She replied, "I didn't fix it. I BOUGHT it." She then offered to buy him a bottle as a "gift." Nothing more was said but I didn't like her getting THAT friendly.

Yesterday the woman brought over a jar of horseradish. I tried every which way to get her to let me pay for it, but she wouldn't tell me how much it cost and she left without the money. When my husband came home I told him about the incident and he said, "Wasn't that sweet of her?" Well. I have another version of her generosity" and I let my husband know exactly how I felt.

I want to mail the horseradish back. My husband says I am acting like a fool. Please tell me why a woman would insist on giving someone else's husband a jar of horseradish unless she had ulterior motives. -- HANDS OFF

Dear Off: Good grief, Lady, the neighbor didn't try to give your husband a pair of silk pajamas or a set of matched luggage.

Thank her for the jar of horseradish and ask her where she purchased it so you can buy it from now on. Then bake her a cake as "payment."

Dear Ann Landers: Because: (a) alcoholism is increasing and (b) people who have had several drinks are not self-disciplined and (c) every community has some folks who are unemployable because of alcohol and (d) at least half the accidents involve a drinking or a drunken driver, I would like to suggest that the bartenders refuse to serve another drink to a patron who has had too much. How about it? -- MISS EXPERIMENT

Dear Miss: In Illinois (as well as in other states) it is against the law for the bartender to serve liquor to a person who is, according to his judgment, intoxicated. The word "judgment" is the hooker, of course. Some bartenders have better judgment than others.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents. . if you can't bet them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

State Adds 62 New Programs in 10 Years

JEFFERSON CITY - Missouri state government has added 62 new programs financed from general revenues in the past 10 years, a Missouri Public Expenditure Survey study reported today.

Forty - five of the programs were added in the last five years, including a number of larger ones, the privately supported governmental research organization reported.

It recalled that those established in 1963 included university branches at St. Louis and Kansas City and three intensive treatment mental health centers. Thirteen new programs were added in 1965 and twenty-one in the last session of the legislature, which enacted the major new programs of medicaid and financial aid to kindergartens.

The survey noted that new programs result from such causes as more college students, development of rapid treatment of mental illness, and modern environmental problems such as water and air pollution.

Another cause, it said, is the federal government, which gives impetus to new state programs by providing matching funds and by requiring states to adopt programs under penaly of losing federal funds. The later has occurred increasingly in recent years, the Survey said.

Ten new state programs added in the last 10 years were given their impetus by the federal government, the Survey reported including three adopted by the last legislature under threat of loss of federal funds. The three were medicaid, motor vehicle inspection and junkyard control.

The survey did not pass on the merit of any of the new programs. It reported that nearly all have increased in cost and some substantially. It commended the legislature's system of appending cost estimates to proposed legislation but said the system would be improved if estimates for a three-to five-year period were required instead of the one-year estimates now normally prepared.

The survey also suggested that the legislature's Fiscal Affairs Committee and staff by given permanent status. The law providing the fiscal committee and staff expires January 1, 1970.

The study reported that new programs established in the last 10 years now require annual appropriations of $67.8 million, including $48.8 million for those established in the last five years. Rising revenues should allow addition of some new programs in the future, but addition of programs at the rate and scope of the last five years could strain the state's finances, the Survey said. It suggested that new programs be added only as growing revenues become available to finance them and their projected growth.

The survey pointed out that the state's adoption of federal programs extends federal control to the state tax moneys required to finance the state's share of the cost. Two hundred state-and-local government aid programs have been added by the federal government since 1963, bringing the total to more than 460, and presenting a confused maze, it said.

The survey urged creation by Congress of a proposed bipartisan Government Program evaluation commission to determine the effectiveness of federal programs. The commission would recommend which programs should be continued and the priority they should have in the appropriation of funds. The legislation creating the commission is expected to receive consideration when Congress reconvenes, the survey said.

Body Packed In Ice Found In Car Trunk

MIAMI, Okla. (AP)— A Texas couple arrested Thursday after an ice-packed body was found in the trunk of their car was held without bond today on a federal kidnaping charge.

Named were David Emmett Mitchell, 26, of Lubbock, and Letha Faye (Vandiver) Hohenberger, 29, of Fort Worth. They were to be taken to Tulsa during the day pending developments in the case.

The body was discovered by a Miami mechanic who was repairing Mitchell's car after it was towed in from the Will Rogers Turnpike.

The dead man was George Drayton Hooper, 62, a hotel clerk who was taken hostage during a $510.80 robbery of the Roma Motel in Dallas on New Year's day. He had been shot in the head.

Dallas Police Capt. Will Fritz filed the charges of murder and robbery against Mitchell. Mitchell and a woman companion from Fort Worth were being held without bail.

Capt. Fritz said a sawed-off shotgun and two pistols were found in the car.

Mitchell called a Miami motor firm and asked for a tow truck. The driver of the tow truck gave Mitchell and his companion a ride to the motel where they were later arrested.

Hours off Duty Slow On Marcus

MARCUS ISLAND (AP) — A sign at the tiny airstrip on this diminuitive island in the central Pacific gives the latitude and longitude.

"That's so people who come here will know where they've been," says Sean Apren, Bill John of San Francisco, one of the 32-man Coast Guard garrison.

"We always send the location to our folks back home so they find it on a map. Nobody's ever heard of it before."

Marcus is about a mile long and three-fourths of a mile wide at its widest. The Coast Guardsmen here beam loran navigational aid signals to U.S. airplanes and ships, including nuclear submarines, in the area. They also man a small weather station.

This was one of numerous Japanese island fortresses but never became a World War II battleground like nearby Iwo Jima or Tarawa, Saipan and Tinian. American forces moved in quietly after the Japanese surrender in 1945.

Sometime this year it, along with its sister islands of the Bonin chain, is due to be returned to Japanese sovereignty.

Whether the U.S. base will remain is a moot point at present, probably to be negotiated in the final Japanese-American agreement.

Meanwhile, the Coast Guard detachment and four civilians— all American citizens of Hawaiian descent — fight boredom and loneliness when off duty.

"We're too busy to be bored on duty," says CWO Jean Jeter, former resident of San Antonio, Tex., now executive officer on Marcus.

"There's always plenty do on the job. "Just keeping all the equipment in working order can be a fulltime proposition."

The island's resupply is almost entirely by air. Planes are scheduled to come in once a week. Sometimes they do.

Music Teacher for 81 Years Descendant of Daniel Boone

BY LEO SCHADE

CHARLESTON, MO.-- Pride in her ancestry, her adopted home in Charleston and 81 years service as a music teacher light up the life of Miss Kate Boone, a vocal and piano instructor. She is 96.

Miss Boone is a descendant of Kentucky Frontiersman Daniel Boone.

One of her voice pupiles was Betty Cooper, who became the wife of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

"She has a beautiful voice," she said.

The aged, nearly blind woman gives lessons in her quarters at Host House, a nursing home. She began to lose her sight 25 years ago and six years ago became almost blind.

She uses a strong light on her piano to teach and minimizes the glare by wearing an eyeshade.

One of her voice pupils is Kathy DeLaney, 16-year-old high school sophomore, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert DeLaney. She is the sixth generation of her family who Miss Boone has taught including her great, great grandmother.

Miss Boone, who thinks she may be the nation's oldest music teacher, doesn't believe that rock and roll is music but she insists that "all music has its place."

"Every child should begin with classical music because it is the basis of all music," she said.

She acknowledges that jazz has merit.

"Guy Lombardo and a few other top band leaders produce beautiful music," she enthuses.

Miss Boone lived 22 years in her native Clinton, Ky. Her great, great grandfather, Squire Bryant Boone, was a brother of Daniel Boone. Her father was born in 1826 six years after Daniel Boone's death.

Although Miss Boone relates that she "never did have a knack for history" because of devotion to music, she recalls hearing stories in her home about the frontiersman.

The family moved to Charleston in 1893. Her father was a vegetable gardener. She is the youngest and last surviving child of Judge William Fenton Boone and Mrs. Boone. She had 10 brothers and two sisters.

Her father died in 1900 and her mother died in 1908.

Oldtime Mississippi county residents recall A. R. Boone, her brother, who was a superintendent of schools and state representative; James Boone, a lawyer, another brother; and two sisters, Mrs. J. E. Hicks and Mrs. J. E. Bowers.

"I started to take piano lessons at the age of six and continued doing so all through my years in college," Miss Boone recalls. "There were two colleges in Clinton, the Methodist and Baptist, and I attended both for short periods."

I earned most of my education and music knowledge by assisting in teaching music, first at Nashville College for Young Ladies at the age of 16, and remained there four years. I taught music at Dr. Price's College in Nashville, Marvin College at Martin, Tenn., and Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tenn., and came to Charleston to continue my music teaching career.

"Naturally, I am proud of my adopted state of Missouri, and Charleston, the home of Governor Hearnes."

On her last birthday she received a mail greeting from President Lyndon Johnson.

New Madrid to Reorganize Its Chamber of Commerce

NEW MADRID - Merchants and businessmen Thursday night voted to enlarge and organize the Chamber of Commerce.

Ninety - seven attended. The meeting originally had been called to discuss formation of a merchants and businessmen association after announcement was made that Noranda Mines Limited would build an aluminum processing plant here.

It was decided that the community needs a strong Chamber of Commerce with the eventual hiring of a full-time manager.

Bill Huff, president of the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce, and Richard Pinkerton, Sikeston Chamber of Commerce manager, discussed the benefits Sikeston has received through its Chamber and answered questions about its activities.

Jim Cravens acted as temporary chairman.

The group voted to start immediately a membership campaign and approved a sliding membership fee based on the size of the business. The minimum is $25.

Appointed to the membership committee were Bill Thompson, Bob Seeman, Geen French, Pete Stover, D.B. Riley, Sam Pennybaker, Corbett Davis, Eastman Fuller, Harold Sloas, Mrs. Edward Shibley, Bob King, S. M. Baird and Bob Blades.

The group agreed to rewrite the bylaws of the old chamber. Appointed to the bylaws committee were Larry Rost, Blades, Hal Hunter Jr., L. H. Recker and Cravens.

Hunter spoke on the possibility of forming a county-wide Chamber of Commerce. The group voted to invite representatives from area towns to the next meeting, set for Jan. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the community building.

Current Taxes 90 Per Cent Collected Now

City tax collections, now about 90 per cent completed, continue to trickle in as more and more motorists are purchasing their city stickers, city collector Ronald Lee reported.

So far, 4,687 city auto licenses have been purchased of the 6,500 due to be sold.

About $267,187, or 90 per cent of the total $296,875.52 in real estate, personal property and merchants and manufactures taxes due, have been collected.

More money was taken in during December, 1966, than was collected this December. But collections in October and November this year were greater than for the same two months last year, Lee said.

A deluge of last minute taxpayers lined the city administration building Saturday. The doors were closed at noon, but collections were not completed till 1:30 p.m.

Taxes incur a penalty charge of one per cent per month after Jan. 2.

Total current taxes collected in December were $125,429.79. Real estate taxes accounted for $89,346.38; personal property taxes came to $29,157.44 and merchants and manufacturers taxes brought the city $6,925.97.

New Madrid County Education Board Explains School Merger Position

NEW MADRID -- The county board of education has proposed the reorganization of seven school districts into one district to prevent reorganization of the county's districts by the state, a statement prepared by the county board reports.

The board's position is made in a mimeographed brochure distributed at a meeting in Portageville. At the meeting representatives of the state department of education at Jefferson City discussed the advantages of the proposed reorganization.

The board said it has based its decision to call for reorganization because of a bill passed by the state legislature and signed into law by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes in the last session.

The law provides for creation of a commission to study all school districts in Missouri. The law states:

"The Missouri school district reorganization commission shall develop a master plan for school district reorganization over the entire state."

This plan will be delivered to the state board of education by Nov. 15. The board will examine the plan and make its recommendations to the legislature Jan. 15, 1969 at the next regular session of the legislature.

"This, in the opinion of all the school people in the state, simply means that there will be reorganization in the state of Missouri either by voluntary means or by legislation as a result of the master plan," the county board states.

Hubert Wheeler, state commissioner of education, has stated that the 815 school districts in the state should be reduced to not more than 135 districts" so that it is apparently the feeling in the state department of education and it will be their recommendation to the legislature that reorganization take place by some means in the whole state," the board continues.

The county board said that it believes that the commission and the state department of education will consider the population centers in the state when the master plan is made.

New Madrid County has no population centers, the board notes. The county consists of a number of small communities, all about the same size, and the problems and their solutions are similar throughout the county, the board states.

"It is further believed that under a master plan New Madrid County would be divided up and become part of school districts in which there was a population center, as we have a population center lying on the north boundary, one on the west boundary, and the center south of the county and east of the county, all of which would result in the present school districts being a part of other districts in other counties."

The county and local school boards and superintendents have expressed the belief that the proposed reorganized district would be large enough to be accepted by the commission and the state department of education and be incorporated in the master plan, especially if the district had been approved by the district's patrons.

The proposed reorganization includes the Portageville, Lilbourn, Matthews, New Madrid, Parma, Morehouse and Higgerson districts.

It has been determined by school officials in the county that the most pressing need is in the trade and technical area and that the proposed district would be large enough to support building and operating a centrally located technical school.

The county board recommends no change in the operation or location of any existing elementary, junior high or high schools. All schools would operate as now," so long as it remained satisfactory with the people."

A survey of county schools conducted by the state department of education in 1967 showed that 70 per cent of the students attending schools in the county terminated their education at the high school level; 30 per cent went on to college.

"This 70 per cent should be offered technical training so as to better fit them to complete in today's market for jobs. This was a recommendation by the survey team," the board says.

The location of the new technical school would be determined by a new board of education, which would be elected after the reorganization plan was approved.

The county board said it would recommend to the new board that it appoint advisory committees of about six from each of the present districts to make recommendations on the location. The county board recommended that the location of the technical school be determined at the same time a bond issue would be submitted to voters to construct and equip the school.

"This would require a two-thirds majority of the voters and would require approval of location as well as issuance of bonds," the board said.

School superintendents in the county were reported to believe that a $2.75 tax rate would be necessary to operate the existing schools. An additional 50 cent levy would be necessary to pay the present bonded indebtedness and the necessary bonding to construct and equip the new technical school.

This would made the tax levy of the new district $3.25 on the $100 valuation.

The superintendents' estimate was made without including any federal funds, which might be available for constructing, equipping and operating the technical school.

If such funds were available, the district could operate at a lesser tax rate, the board feels.

If reorganization is approved, a new six-member school board will be elected. The county board recommends that each of the six high school districts -- Higgerson is an elementary school district -- represented by one director on the new board.

The new district would have an assessed valuation of about $43 million and "would be one of the larger and financially sounder districts in any rural area in the state," the board said.

At the public meeting at Portageville questions were raised about whether vocational training could be offered by separate school districts without reorganization.

B. W. Robinson, assistant commissioner and director of vocational education for the state department of education at Jefferson City, explained that no existing school district in the county support a vocational school.

In an enlarged school district there would be more students to support a varied offering of programs. Also, if the school were built and operated by only one of the existing districts, that district could not tax the other districts using the school's facilities, he explained.

It therefore could not raise enough money to build and operate a vocational school, which is an expensive venture, he said.

Members of the county board are Lyle Bird, Matthews, president; Charles Pikey, Conran, vice president; James Fletcher, Gideon; A. C. Riley, New Madrid; Comer Hicks, Risco; Tom Maschmeier, Lilbourn, and Sam Bodine, New Madrid secretary and nonvoting member.

The proposed date for the reorganization vote was Jan. 9, but the election has been postponed by a temporary injunction. It was ordered after petitioners of the Morehouse C-12 district requested postponement of the election until they can vote on whether to annex the C-12 district to the Sikeston R-6 district.

Special Judge Rex Henson of Poplar Bluff will rule Feb. 5 on whether to make the injunction permanent and require the C-12 board of education to call a special election proposing the annexation of the C-12 district to the R-6 district.

Scott County chief deputy Eddie Michael arrested James Shannon Mason, 20, in Sikeston Thursday and turned him over to military authorities.

Trial Remap Plan Drawn By Copeland

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) – When Missouri's legislators convene in special session Jan. 12, they'll have a sample redistricting bill to work from.

They can accept it or, as is more probable, make substantial changes in the lines that carve the state into 10 congressional districts. A federal court knocked out the 1967 congressional redistricting a week ago.

Now Gov. Warren E. Hearnes is planning a two-way attack on the problem– get the effectiveness of the court rejection either delayed or overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court or get a new redistricting law from the legislature.

Both procedures are fraught with obstacles, not the least of which would be to get two-thirds approval in each house of the Missouri Legislature to make any new redistricting plan become effective immediately in this election year.

Candidates must file for Congress by April 30 but at this moment they don't have any districts to run in.

Rep. Fred E. Copeland, D-New Madrid, chairman of the House redistricting committee, acted at Hearnes' request by drawing a new plan for realigning the districts in accordance with federal one-man, one-vote decisions.

He said the districts he completed Thursday varied less than 1 per cent from the average district population of 431,981. The districts rejected last week by the federal court varied around 4 per cent.

Both Copeland and Hearnes called the new plan just a start from which the special legislative session can work toward a product that could win the necessary majority approval.

It's already produced some action and criticism around the state.

William Burlison, Cape Girardeau County prosecuting attorney, said he intended to continue his campaign for the Democratic nomination in the 10th District of southeastern Missouri no matter how thlines are drawn.

Rep. David Rolwing, D-Charleston, announced he had decided not to run for Congress. Instead, he said, he would seek a return to the Missouri House.

Another state legislator, Rep. James P. (Pal) Troupe, D-St. Louis, decided not to try to become Missouri's first Negro congressman. He said he would not run in the 1st congressional District but, instead, would try to come back to the Missouri House.

Copleland said he didn't know the effect of his new bill politically. His primary purpose was to draft a redistricting plan that would meet the federal mandate, he said.

But it appeared to some the plan would not be acceptable to St. Louis Negroes or to the Republicans in the 2nd District of St. Louis County– where Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, R-Webster Groves, has become a veteran congressman.

This time Curtis has decided to seek the GOP U.S. senatorial nomination.

Rep. R. J. (Bus) King, R-Clayton, House minority leader, said it seriously cut into the Renublican edge in the 2nd. He called it an effort to "completely neutralize the entire Republican vote in St. Louis County."

A Negro House member, Rep. Raymond Howard, D-St. Louis, was even more critical. He said the urban Negro vote was so split that his race would have little chance in the 1st District.

"We would fight that plan until we die," he said. "If we do not get a district carved out for Negroes, the Democratic party will suffer at the polls."

Another change produced by the Copeland plan would be to switch Richard H. Ichord, D-Houston, from the 8th District to the 10th. Some effort was made to produce that change last year but it fell through.

Still, no matter how the districts are drawn or who does it there will be lots of opposition in a legislature composed of 183 House members and 34 senators– each one with his own political obligations or aspirations.

Here's how Copeland proposed the state be re-aligned for Congress:

1st District (population 431,946) – St. Louis County townships of Normandy, Washington, Lincoln and Jefferson plus the city wards 1, 2, 3, 4, 18, 20, 21, 22, 25, 26, 27 and 28.

2nd District (population 432,518)– St. Louis County townships of Airport, Concord, Clayton, Creve Coeur, Ferguson, Gravois, Hadley, Midland and St. Ferdinand.

3rd District (population 433,047 – St. Louis city wards 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 23 and 24.

4th District (population 432,438 – Kansas City Ward 15 and all of Ward 24 except the 4th precinct, plus the Jackson County townships of Washington, Blue, Brooking, Fort Osage, Van Buren, Prairie and Sni-A-Bar and the counties of Bates, Cass, Henry, Johnson, Pettis, Saline, Vernon, Lafayette, Benton, St. Clair, Cedar, Hickory and Barton.

5th District (population 432,162) – Kansas City wards of 1 through 14 plus wards 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 22, 23, 25 and the 4th precinct of Ward 24.

7th District (population 432,544) – Counties of McDonald, Newton, Jasper, Barry, Lawrence, Dadle, Polk, Greene, Christian, Stone, Taney, Dallas, Webster, Wright, Douglas, Morgan, Laclede, Camden and Ozark.

8th District (population 430,520) – Counties of Ralls, Marion, Lewis, Clark, Scotland, Knox, Shelby, Monroe, Audrain, Osage, Gasconade, Maries, Crawford, Cole, Boone, Randolph, Macon, Adair, Schuyler, Pulaski, Phelps, Miller, Cooper and Moniteau.

9th District (population 431,631)– St. Lous County townships of Florissant, Spanish Lake, Bonhomme, Meramec, Lemay and the counties of St. Charles, Franklin, Jefferson, St. Francois, Lincoln, Warren, Pike, Montgomery and Callaway.

10th District (population 429,901)– Counties of Dunklin, Pemiscot, Stoddard, New Madrid, Scott, Mississippi, Butler, Wayne, Bollinger, Cape Girardeau, Madison, Iron, Reynolds, Carter, Ripley, Dent, Texas, Shannon, Howell, Oregon, Washington, Ste. Genevieve and Perry.

TEACHING VOICE to the sixth generation of the same family, is Miss Kate Boone, 96, with her pupil, Miss Kathy DeLaney, 16, who comes to her quarters at the Host House in Charleston, for her lessons.

Music Teacher for 81 Years Descendant of Daniel Boone

BY LEO SCHADE

CHARLESTON, MO.-- Pride in her ancestry, her adopted home in Charleston and 81 years service as a music teacher light up the life of Miss Kate Boone, a vocal and piano instructor. She is 96.

Miss Boone is a descendant of Kentucky Frontiersman Daniel Boone.

One of her voice pupiles was Betty Cooper, who became the wife of Gov. Warren E. Hearnes.

"She has a beautiful voice," she said.

The aged, nearly blind woman gives lessons in her quarters at Host House, a nursing home. She began to lose her sight 25 years ago and six years ago became almost blind.

She uses a strong light on her piano to teach and minimizes the glare by wearing an eyeshade.

One of her voice pupils is Kathy DeLaney, 16-year-old high school sophomore, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert DeLaney. She is the sixth generation of her family who Miss Boone has taught including her great, great grandmother.

Miss Boone, who thinks she may be the nation's oldest music teacher, doesn't believe that rock and roll is music but she insists that "all music has its place."

"Every child should begin with classical music because it is the basis of all music," she said.

She acknowledges that jazz has merit.

"Guy Lombardo and a few other top band leaders produce beautiful music," she enthuses.

Miss Boone lived 22 years in her native Clinton, Ky. Her great, great grandfather, Squire Bryant Boone, was a brother of Daniel Boone. Her father was born in 1826 six years after Daniel Boone's death.

Although Miss Boone relates that she "never did have a knack for history" because of devotion to music, she recalls hearing stories in her home about the frontiersman.

The family moved to Charleston in 1893. Her father was a vegetable gardener. She is the youngest and last surviving child of Judge William Fenton Boone and Mrs. Boone. She had 10 brothers and two sisters.

Her father died in 1900 and her mother died in 1908.

Oldtime Mississippi county residents recall A. R. Boone, her brother, who was a superintendent of schools and state representative; James Boone, a lawyer, another brother; and two sisters, Mrs. J. E. Hicks and Mrs. J. E. Bowers.

"I started to take piano lessons at the age of six and continued doing so all through my years in college," Miss Boone recalls. "There were two colleges in Clinton, the Methodist and Baptist, and I attended both for short periods."

I earned most of my education and music knowledge by assisting in teaching music, first at Nashville College for Young Ladies at the age of 16, and remained there four years. I taught music at Dr. Price's College in Nashville, Marvin College at Martin, Tenn., and Cumberland University, Lebanon, Tenn., and came to Charleston to continue my music teaching career.

"Naturally, I am proud of my adopted state of Missouri, and Charleston, the home of Governor Hearnes."

On her last birthday she received a mail greeting from President Lyndon Johnson.

New Madrid to Reorganize Its Chamber of Commerce

NEW MADRID - Merchants and businessmen Thursday night voted to enlarge and organize the Chamber of Commerce.

Ninety - seven attended. The meeting originally had been called to discuss formation of a merchants and businessmen association after announcement was made that Noranda Mines Limited would build an aluminum processing plant here.

It was decided that the community needs a strong Chamber of Commerce with the eventual hiring of a full-time manager.

Bill Huff, president of the Sikeston Chamber of Commerce, and Richard Pinkerton, Sikeston Chamber of Commerce manager, discussed the benefits Sikeston has received through its Chamber and answered questions about its activities.

Jim Cravens acted as temporary chairman.

The group voted to start immediately a membership campaign and approved a sliding membership fee based on the size of the business. The minimum is $25.

Appointed to the membership committee were Bill Thompson, Bob Seeman, Geen French, Pete Stover, D.B. Riley, Sam Pennybaker, Corbett Davis, Eastman Fuller, Harold Sloas, Mrs. Edward Shibley, Bob King, S. M. Baird and Bob Blades.

The group agreed to rewrite the bylaws of the old chamber. Appointed to the bylaws committee were Larry Rost, Blades, Hal Hunter Jr., L. H. Recker and Cravens.

Hunter spoke on the possibility of forming a county-wide Chamber of Commerce. The group voted to invite representatives from area towns to the next meeting, set for Jan. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the community building.

Current Taxes 90 Per Cent Collected Now

City tax collections, now about 90 per cent completed, continue to trickle in as more and more motorists are purchasing their city stickers, city collector Ronald Lee reported.

So far, 4,687 city auto licenses have been purchased of the 6,500 due to be sold.

About $267,187, or 90 per cent of the total $296,875.52 in real estate, personal property and merchants and manufactures taxes due, have been collected.

More money was taken in during December, 1966, than was collected this December. But collections in October and November this year were greater than for the same two months last year, Lee said.

A deluge of last minute taxpayers lined the city administration building Saturday. The doors were closed at noon, but collections were not completed till 1:30 p.m.

Taxes incur a penalty charge of one per cent per month after Jan. 2.

Total current taxes collected in December were $125,429.79. Real estate taxes accounted for $89,346.38; personal property taxes came to $29,157.44 and merchants and manufacturers taxes brought the city $6,925.97.

Delinquent real estate taxes paid in December for 1963-66, totaled $1,069.92. Delinquent personal property taxes for 1963-66, paid in December totaled $131.68. Back merchants and manufacturers taxes for 1966, paid last month came to $19.91.

License collections brought in $16,200.53. Auto licenses accounted for $13,158 of the total while merchants licenses brought in $3,014.53. Dog licenses accounted for another $28.

Miscellaneous collections last month totaled $3,147.08, with the $2,995.78 monthly franchise payment by Associated Natural Gas accounting for the bulk of it. Interest amounted to $144.40 and other costs were $6.90.

The total collections for the month came to $145,998.91.

New Madrid County Education Board Explains School Merger Position

NEW MADRID -- The county board of education has proposed the reorganization of seven school districts into one district to prevent reorganization of the county's districts by the state, a statement prepared by the county board reports.

The board's position is made in a mimeographed brochure distributed at a meeting in Portageville. At the meeting representatives of the state department of education at Jefferson City discussed the advantages of the proposed reorganization.

The board said it has based its decision to call for reorganization because of a bill passed by the state legislature and signed into law by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes in the last session.

The law provides for creation of a commission to study all school districts in Missouri. The law states:

"The Missouri school district reorganization commission shall develop a master plan for school district reorganization over the entire state."

This plan will be delivered to the state board of education by Nov. 15. The board will examine the plan and make its recommendations to the legislature Jan. 15, 1969 at the next regular session of the legislature.

"This, in the opinion of all the school people in the state, simply means that there will be reorganization in the state of Missouri either by voluntary means or by legislation as a result of the master plan," the county board states.

Hubert Wheeler, state commissioner of education, has stated that the 815 school districts in the state should be reduced to not more than 135 districts" so that it is apparently the feeling in the state department of education and it will be their recommendation to the legislature that reorganization take place by some means in the whole state," the board continues.

The county board said that it believes that the commission and the state department of education will consider the population centers in the state when the master plan is made.

New Madrid County has no population centers, the board notes. The county consists of a number of small communities, all about the same size, and the problems and their solutions are similar throughout the county, the board states.

"It is further believed that under a master plan New Madrid County would be divided up and become part of school districts in which there was a population center, as we have a population center lying on the north boundary, one on the west boundary, and the center south of the county and east of the county, all of which would result in the present school districts being a part of other districts in other counties."

The county and local school boards and superintendents have expressed the belief that the proposed reorganized district would be large enough to be accepted by the commission and the state department of education and be incorporated in the master plan, especially if the district had been approved by the district's patrons.

The proposed reorganization includes the Portageville, Lilbourn, Matthews, New Madrid, Parma, Morehouse and Higgerson districts.

It has been determined by school officials in the county that the most pressing need is in the trade and technical area and that the proposed district would be large enough to support building and operating a centrally located technical school.

The county board recommends no change in the operation or location of any existing elementary, junior high or high schools. All schools would operate as now," so long as it remained satisfactory with the people."

A survey of county schools conducted by the state department of education in 1967 showed that 70 per cent of the students attending schools in the county terminated their education at the high school level; 30 per cent went on to college.

"This 70 per cent should be offered technical training so as to better fit them to complete in today's market for jobs. This was a recommendation by the survey team," the board says.

The location of the new technical school would be determined by a new board of education, which would be elected after the reorganization plan was approved.

The county board said it would recommend to the new board that it appoint advisory committees of about six from each of the present districts to make recommendations on the location. The county board recommended that the location of the technical school be determined at the same time a bond issue would be submitted to voters to construct and equip the school.

"This would require a two-thirds majority of the voters and would require approval of location as well as issuance of bonds," the board said.

School superintendents in the county were reported to believe that a $2.75 tax rate would be necessary to operate the existing schools. An additional 50 cent levy would be necessary to pay the present bonded indebtedness and the necessary bonding to construct and equip the new technical school.

This would made the tax levy of the new district $3.25 on the $100 valuation.

The superintendents' estimate was made without including any federal funds, which might be available for constructing, equipping and operating the technical school.

If such funds were available, the district could operate at a lesser tax rate, the board feels.

If reorganization is approved, a new six-member school board will be elected. The county board recommends that each of the six high school districts -- Higgerson is an elementary school district -- represented by one director on the new board.

The new district would have an assessed valuation of about $43 million and "would be one of the larger and financially sounder districts in any rural area in the state," the board said.

At the public meeting at Portageville questions were raised about whether vocational training could be offered by separate school districts without reorganization.

B. W. Robinson, assistant commissioner and director of vocational education for the state department of education at Jefferson City, explained that no existing school district in the county support a vocational school.

In an enlarged school district there would be more students to support a varied offering of programs. Also, if the school were built and operated by only one of the existing districts, that district could not tax the other districts using the school's facilities, he explained.

It therefore could not raise enough money to build and operate a vocational school, which is an expensive venture, he said.

Members of the county board are Lyle Bird, Matthews, president; Charles Pikey, Conran, vice president; James Fletcher, Gideon; A. C. Riley, New Madrid; Comer Hicks, Risco; Tom Maschmeier, Lilbourn, and Sam Bodine, New Madrid secretary and nonvoting member.

The proposed date for the reorganization vote was Jan. 9, but the election has been postponed by a temporary injunction. It was ordered after petitioners of the Morehouse C-12 district requested postponement of the election until they can vote on whether to annex the C-12 district to the Sikeston R-6 district.

Special Judge Rex Henson of Poplar Bluff will rule Feb. 5 on whether to make the injunction permanent and require the C-12 board of education to call a special election proposing the annexation of the C-12 district to the R-6 district.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!
MONUMENTALLY MENACING PSYCHE INVASION?

The 556-question Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory is given students in every section of the country, and government and industry use the test to screen potential employees. More than 700,000 copies of the test were sold to school boards and employers in the past year.

The test has been denounced by Congressional investigators and by psychologists as an outrageous invasion of privacy. Dr. Karl Smith, a professor of industrial psychology at the University of Wisconsin, told the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights that the MMPI is a "form of medical quackery." He described the test as "double-talk, double-dealing, discriminatory, simple-minded and claptrap."

Junior high school students are required to answer true-false questions such as these:

.My sex life is satisfactory.

.I am very strongly attracted to members of my own sex.

.I have never engaged in an unusual sex practice.

.Christ performed miracles such as changing water to wine.

.I go to church almost every week.

On this and other personality tests, Martin Gross, author of The Brain Watchers, has conducted extensive research. He describes them as inaccurate, immoral instruments whose use should be prohibited by law.

"The extent of this testing is frightening. It is used in the selection and upgrading of men and women in every area of life, from ministers to defense workers. It is used almost routinely in the American school system, without the knowledge or permission of parents, in an invasion of privacy that is supported by the taxpayer."

Another who has directed an intensive probe of personality tests used in American schools is Cornelius Gallagher, Democratic Congressman from New Jersey. He says a "Measurement of Wants" test given California students asked how much money they would need to:

.Spit on the crucifix.

.Eat a pound of flesh.

.Desecrate a church service.

Another test, designed to probe the student's "moral values inventory," sets up alternatives and asks the students to choose one over the other. Examples are:

.Which is worse, denying the existence of God or hurting the feelings of a friend?

.Which is worse, blasphemy or using an obscene word in referring to one's own mother?

.Which is worse, spitting on the Bible or spitting on the American flag?

In Maryland, Baltimore students were given a test which asked whether any of 355 statements applied to them. Typical queries, cast in the form of statements are:

.Many of my dreams are about sex matters.

.During one period when I was a youngster I stole things.

.I wish I were not bothered by thoughts of sex.

.There has been a lack of real affection and love in my home.

Although given to school children throughout the country, these tests are shrouded in secrecy. Children who take the tests are admonished not to tell their parents the contents of the questions asked.

One major firm that sells these tests warns in the accompanying instructions: "Strict adherence to all test security instructions is strongly urged to prevent any security breaches and the serious consequences thereof."

Objections that sex and religion are private matters of no concern to school boards and prospective employees have been dismissed by those who devise the tests. States the author of the MMPI tests, "I don't think you can live that way today. I believe that in a society that has to work together, our personalities impinge on one another. We all make decisions about what kind of people we like or don't like. Tests are merely tools to help make such decisions."

So, this kind of testing of students continues despite denouncement by Congressional investigators and psychologists that the tests are outrageous invasions of privacy.

Mrs. Joan Zola felt the full impact of this psyche probing when she applied for a position with one of the largest government agencies in Washington. In National Review, she wrote about her experience during numerous interviews, security checks and tests designed to assess skills required for the government job. Next came a medical examination which included psychological testing and an encounter with the MMPI. Having studied psychology courses in college, Mrs. Zola was quite familiar with most of the tests administered. She proceeded to give the "right" answers to impertinent questions about her morals, sex life, and attitude toward God.

The last so-called test was composed of questions requiring essay-type answers. Realizing that her testers wanted details about her parents' private lives, her moral convictions, more on her own sex life, and so forth, applicant Zola supplied a few short sentences, such as "My mother is a good mother," left the rest blank, and closed the book.

Next came an interview with the doctor. When asked why she had not answered most of the questions she replied that she considered such matters to be none of the Agency's business, since they dealt with neither her qualifications nor her loyalty, nor did they have any particular bearing on her moral character.

This interview she described as one of long silences, interrupted by such remarks from the doctor as, "I see you're a Catholic. Do you ever hear voices, see visions?"

He wanted to know how she squared her moral principles with her sex drive, and how she fared romantically. Just to please him she made up a romance in Paris. She was sent back to Personnel; and several weeks later, to her surprise, she was told that she had the job.

The Agency flew her from her home in California to Washington where she met her instructors and was ready to start training. But, oops, there came word from the medical section that she hadn't answered all the questions. She said that if the job depended on answering questions she considered offensive, then she didn't want the job. Next was a chat with yet another brain-watcher, who prescribed two more days of tests.

Mrs. Zola could figure which were the desired answers. Eventually, however, they wore her down to the point where she balked. When asked what she considered the most important thing in life, she ignored the psychologically-sound answers of sex, money, and friendliness and answered: "Saving my soul." Her inability to draw pictures elicted the doctor's comment: "difficulty depicting human beings."

A third doctor lectured her on her attitude.

Mrs. Zola, a Fulbright scholar, writes of the interview with Doctor Number Three:

". . . did I understand why they were doing this; what did I mean, the tests gave phony results, blah, blah. The doctor's voice rose steadily and at last he fairly shouted, so help me, 'Would you have any respect for us if we let you get away with this?"

The folks in Personnel later told her she "should have lied cooperatively like everybody else."

When word finally came that she was unacceptable, Personnel offered to fly her home to California, or find her another job in Washington.

Mrs. Zola's parting shot answers a question about cost that bureauchiatrists will never include in a test:

"The amount of money the whole thing cost the taxpayers pains one, but wasn't it worth it to have preserved the image of a well-adjusted Agency, free from surly dissidents harping on privacy?"

Most of us today accept testing as "voluntary." Yet even psychiatrists admit that the questions asked on psychological questionnaires are cleverly designed to trap the subject. Through his answers he is led to reveal subconscious attitudes and reactions of which he himself may not be aware. Are we no longer entitled the right to privacy and to our individual personalities?

Here are some sample true-and-false questions taken from psychological and personality tests used by Federal agencies:

.I like to listen to and tell jokes in which sex plays a major part.

.I believe women ought to have as much sexual freedom as men.

.I think Lincoln was greater than Washington.

.Sometimes I am strongly attracted by the personal articles of others, such as shoes, gloves, etc., so that I want to handle or steal them though I have no use for them.

.It takes a lot of argument to convince most people of the truth.

.I have often had to take orders from someone who did not know as much as I did.

.I know who is responsible for most of my troubles.

.I believe there is a Devil and a Hell in afterlife.

As Martin Gross has pointed out, most of the tests being used are unreliable. The Government's use of psychological tests for Federal employees constitutes "one of the most reprehensible invasions of privacy and denial of Constitutional rights extant today," he says.

"We have become a nation of snoopers," charged Representative Gallagher. "Now the magic of the computer is helping to gather such a wealth of information. . . that all of us may some day stand psychologically naked."

The American people are becoming more and more aware of the inroads being made by the privacy invaders; they are becoming more and more concerned over the implications of this invasion; and they are making their feelings known.

House and Senate committees have been at work for some time trying to unravel the often sordid story of privacy invasion via psychological testing and electronic snooping and even snooping into first-class mail without a search warrant. No device is being overlooked, not even the biggest martini olive for cocktail party eavesdropping; but these committees need the support and cooperation of all thoughtful Americans.

RESTLESS DRIVE OF INDUSTRY

Corporate growth has reached almost astronomical proportions. It has been accompanied by increasing concern in many quarters with the inherent dangers of bigness. But, those who have held sincere reservations about industrial growth may find solid comfort in a characteristic of this growth that is typically American - technological change.

The restless searching for a better way to do things that has been the hallmark of progress in this country is, if anything, more pronounced today than ever before. In a hundred years or so, we have come from the covered wagon to the supersonic jet. Major industries of a century ago are as extinct as the Passenger Pigeon. No one really knows what life will be like 50 or 100 years from now.

With increasing frequency, we read of such things as the development of a fuel cell power plant, which could conceivably revolutionize the energy business. A recent news release tells of a move by more than a score of gas systems and gas utility companies to push a large-scale research program, looking to the development of just such a power plant that would be practicable and marketable. The program is estimated to cost $20 million, and of course, the aim is to find larger markets for natural gas in competition with other energy industries. Whether the fuel cell is a harbinger of things to come is anyone's guess.

The important thing, so far as the public is concerned, is that the restless drive and competitive urge of industry is very much alive. This is well demonstrated by the gas industry itself, which was a comparative infant a mere decade or so ago.

OLD DISSENTER BUT 100 PCT. LOYAL

If there really are some young people who believe that no one over 30 is to be trusted, they should be two and half times as wary of advice from an octogenarian.

But just on the chance that age and wisdom are not incompatible, they might profitably reflect on some sentiments expressed the other day by Norman Thomas, six-time Socialist party candidate for the presidency, who will be 83 on Nov. 20.

Thomas is nearly blind, is crippled by arthritis and injuries from an automobile accident and suffers fromheart trouble and "a catalogue of infirmities."

None of which has anything to do with the functioning of his mind, as evident in what may have been his farewell speech, given before an international conference of students.

"I don't like the sight of young people burning the flag of my country, the country I love," said the elder statesman of American dissenters.

While acidly critical of the administration's handling of the Vietnam war, among other things, Thomas emphasized to the students that he had affection as well as criticism for his country.

Affection for country. This is something modern - day dissenters could display a little more of - not the conventional patriotism that waves the flag and shouts, "My country, right or wrong," but an affection that springs from a deep belief in and loyalty to the ideals on which the nation was founded.

Affection for country. It marks the difference between an old crusader who will go on championing those ideals until his last breath and those whose motto seems to be: "Turn on, drop out and tear down."

Just as the girl was in front of him, a breeze picked up her dress high over her head - revealing her anatomy to the startled American.

To break the embarrassment, the American graciously tipped his hat and politely remarked: "It is a bit airy this morning isn't it?"

BETTER WAYS TO BETTER DAYS

Americans who love their country and are genuninely opposed to communism and socialism have the facts on their side. But the truth can be unpopular and unwelcome, and up to now we have been unable to win many arguments. People who want to change our laws by demonstration or to interpret the law in a way that will permit them to do whatever they please belong on the opposite side from those who cherish freedom.

Left and right of center will have more meaning when we begin thinking of left or right of the "average." The debate between people with the burdensome lable "Conservative" and those who have preempted the very fine title "Liberal" is going badly for freedom. The much-sought-after and highly regarded title, "Moderate," is only a new version of "Middle - of - the-road." Moderates, after all, are those who cannot think through the issues accurately and lack the courage of their convictions to take a stand. Trying to listen to public opinion, they weave back and forth, with little depth and weight.

The lines would be more easily discernible if drawn between those showing love of country who could be called "Constructives," and those who have permitted their thinking to be twisted to such an extent that they are tolerant of communism and crime.

Many ask, "Is there real danger that we will lose our liberty or that the nation will surrender its sovereignty?" If the answer is affirmative, surely everyone must begin doing all that he can to safeguard our future. H.L.H.

HOME TOWN, U.S.A. (AP) -- "Housewives are such utter fools," announced Trellis Mae Peeble, America's most average wife.

When Trellis Mae made a flat statement like that, Wilbur, her husband, knew better than to contradict her. He also knew better than to agree with her outright.

"Uh-uhm," he said noncommittaly.

"Aren't you ever interested in why I think all housewives are utter fools?" demanded Trellis Mae.

"Uh huh," replied her spouse, looking at her warily.

"The reason I think we housewives are such utter fools is that we are all so disorganized -- totally disorganized."

"Oh, I wouldn't say that about you," said Wilbur, glancing around the kitchen. "The place looks pretty spic and span -- or will, anyways, after I finish drying the dishes and you take out the garbage."

"I am not talking about neatness, I am talking about being disorganized."

"Well, if housewives are disorganized," asked Wilbur, still at sea, "just who is organized?"

"The subway workers and bus drivers of New York City -- that's who!" exclaimed Trellis Mae.

"I know you're not going to leave me just standing here wondering," murmured Wilbur. "What's it all about?"

"Well, those transit workers have got a great big union for all. And I just read in the paper they signed a new contract that will get them more money and has new fringers on their old fringe benefits."

"Such as?"

"Well, the big thing is that they can retire at half-pay after spending only 20 years in a nice warm comfortable subway, where they have chances to meet all kinds of interesting people."

"And -- ?"

"And I don't think it's fair."

"Fair to whom?"

"Fair to us housewives. Subway drivers have it easy compared to housewives.

"And it's all because we're so disorganized. We should have a great big union, too, and win equal rights with the subway drivers. Then we could retire in 20 years at half-pay."

"The idea has some merit," said Wilbur, after a thoughtful pause. "Let me see now. We've been married 19 years, and I'm paying you nothing a week. That means in another year I could retire you at half of that."

"Yes, but -."

"Then, of course, I'd have the problem of breaking in a younger wife on the job," continued her husband.

"A what?"

"A younger wife."

"Oh, Wilbur, you wouldn't, would you?" said Trellis Mae.

"You just form that big union of wives and see what happens," said Wilbur, and as he bent and kissed her triumphantly he knew that this was one subject Trellis Mae would never bring up again in his lifetime.

Washington Merry - Go - Round

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY:

FBI "Bug" picked up columnist quizzing black; this column was checking on Black's link with gambling syndicate; secret summary of interview rushed to FBI field offices.

WASHINGTON -- The secret microphones planted by the FBI in Fred Black's hotel suite not only picked up the private conversations of congressional leaders, white house aides and business tycoons, but also caught newspaper columnists in quest of information. We happen to be the columnists whose efforts were recorded on hidden FBI tapes.

We were investigating the same rumors as the justice department namely that Black was the gambling syndicate's front man in Washington. Unknown to us, however, the FBI was tuned in on our investigation.

One of the FBI's secret summaries states: "The following communication pertains to information obtained by the informant (meaning the FBI bug) concerning a visit to Black by columnist Jack Anderson, associate of Drew Pearson, on 4-5-63 at approximately 6 p.m."

In response to questions, according to the transcript, Black admitted that a grand jury was investigating him "find some conflict of interest or maybe I was paying off somebody."

"Did they bring Levinson before the grand jury?" asked Anderson.

"Ed Levinson?"

The FBI noted that "this question seemed to surprise Black."

"I never had any business dealings with him," said Black.

"They're saying you're representing him."

JUST GOOD FRIENDS?

"Well that isn't true, I emphatically deny it. He's one of the best friends I have over a period of two years. . ."

Black acknowledged that his association with Levinson had aroused the suspicions of the FBI which, Black claimed, watched him when he visited Las Vegas.

"They're watching everyone with those people," said Anderson. "They think that you're some kind of a bag man or something for them."

"I represent legitimate companies," protested Black.

"Have you ever talked to any senators or congressmen or anybody about any of their problems out there?"

"No," said Black, "the only thing I did was for Jimmy Morrison (then congressman from Louisiana). He had charge of getting a bunch of congressional secretaries and people like that on a summer trip when congress was over. Through Cliff Jones, who owns the Thunderbird, I arranged for them to headquarter at the Thunderbird. .."

"They told me that you represented Levinson," Anderson persisted.

"Jack," pleaded Black, "some day when Eddie comes here for dinner or something, I want you to meet him. He's a little hard to describe. I know his whole background. He was probably the biggest bookmaker Detroit ever had. I know he was the biggest gambler Miami ever had. Then he went to Las Vegas. He came under the granddaddy law; it excused him for anything he ever did as long as he stayed working in Nevada. He told us all these things."

Anderson, referring again to the justice department's investigation, contended: "They aren't going to that extent because they saw you in his (Levinson's) company. They have to be convinced of more than that. What they told me, my informant told me, they think they got something."

Immediately after Anderson's departure, according to the transcript, Black called in John Cye Cheasty, a private eye, and reported the results of the interview.

BEWARE OF PEARSON!

"The justice department told him (Anderson) they consider me a liaison man and bag man for Las Vegas, the gamblers in Las Vegas," said Black.

"Pearson could murder you," warned Cheasty.

"No, he couldn't murder me."

"He could give you bad publicity."

Thinking it over, Black growled: "They wanted him to blast me in the paper."

"They wanted to plant a story," agreed Cheasty. "I can't understand why they gave that to Anderson. That, to me is dirty pool."

"I think this comes from Bobby Kennedy (then attorney general," said Black, and he cussed out Kennedy bitterly.

Shortly after the tapes were transcribed, the FBI sent an urgent summary by teletype to the Las Vegas and Los Angeles field offices. The message was marked "June," a code word for "secret."

"(Black) said he was going to tell Levinson about the information received from Anderson," concluded the teletype, then added: "Las Vegas and Los Angeles be alert for information pertaining to Black's statement that he would furnish information from Anderson to Levinson."

Once the FBI sets up its listening devices, apparently, there's no telling whose conversations might be overheard.

Note: Judge William Jones has broken all precedents by ordering the FBI to furnish him with all its records in the Black case. Under protest, J. Edgar Hoover has turned over the full file; but he is still pleading with the court not to release everything to Black's attorneys. Judge Jones has angrily ordered an investigation meanwhile, into how we got hold of the still-secret transcripts.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

MONUMENTALLY MENACING PSYCHE INVASION?

The 556-question Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory is given students in every section of the country, and government and industry use the test to screen potential employees. More than 700,000 copies of the test were sold to school boards and employers in the past year.

The test has been denounced by Congressional investigators and by psychologists as an outrageous invasion of privacy. Dr. Karl Smith, a professor of industrial psychology at the University of Wisconsin, told the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights that the MMPI is a "form of medical quackery." He described the test as "double-talk, double-dealing, discriminatory, simple-minded and claptrap."

Junior high school students are required to answer true-false questions such as these:

.My sex life is satisfactory.

.I am very strongly attracted to members of my own sex.

.I have never engaged in an unusual sex practice.

.Christ performed miracles such as changing water to wine.

.I go to church almost every week.

On this and other personality tests, Martin Gross, author of The Brain Watchers, has conducted extensive research. He describes them as inaccurate, immoral instruments whose use should be prohibited by law.

"The extent of this testing is frightening. It is used in the selection and upgrading of men and women in every area of life, from ministers to defense workers. It is used almost routinely in the American school system, without the knowledge or permission of parents, in an invasion of privacy that is supported by the taxpayer."

Another who has directed an intensive probe of personality tests used in American schools is Cornelius Gallagher, Democratic Congressman from New Jersey. He says a "Measurement of Wants" test given California students asked how much money they would need to:

.Spit on the crucifix.

.Eat a pound of flesh.

.Desecrate a church service.

Another test, designed to probe the student's "moral values inventory," sets up alternatives and asks the students to choose one over the other. Examples are:

.Which is worse, denying the existence of God or hurting the feelings of a friend?

.Which is worse, blasphemy or using an obscene word in referring to one's own mother?

.Which is worse, spitting on the Bible or spitting on the American flag?

In Maryland, Baltimore students were given a test which asked whether any of 355 statements applied to them. Typical queries, cast in the form of statements are:

.Many of my dreams are about sex matters.

.During one period when I was a youngster I stole things.

.I wish I were not bothered by thoughts of sex.

.There has been a lack of real affection and love in my home.

Although given to school children throughout the country, these tests are shrouded in secrecy. Children who take the tests are admonished not to tell their parents the contents of the questions asked.

One major firm that sells these tests warns in the accompanying instructions: "Strict adherence to all test security instructions is strongly urged to prevent any security breaches and the serious consequences thereof."

Objections that sex and religion are private matters of no concern to school boards and prospective employees have been dismissed by those who devise the tests. States the author of the MMPI tests, "I don't think you can live that way today. I believe that in a society that has to work together, our personalities impinge on one another. We all make decisions about what kind of people we like or don't like. Tests are merely tools to help make such decisions."

So, this kind of testing of students continues despite denouncement by Congressional investigators and psychologists that the tests are outrageous invasions of privacy.

Mrs. Joan Zola felt the full impact of this psyche probing when she applied for a position with one of the largest government agencies in Washington. In National Review, she wrote about her experience during numerous interviews, security checks and tests designed to assess skills required for the government job. Next came a medical examination which included psychological testing and an encounter with the MMPI. Having studied psychology courses in college, Mrs. Zola was quite familiar with most of the tests administered. She proceeded to give the "right" answers to impertinent questions about her morals, sex life, and attitude toward God.

The last so-called test was composed of questions requiring essay-type answers. Realizing that her testers wanted details about her parents' private lives, her moral convictions, more on her own sex life, and so forth, applicant Zola supplied a few short sentences, such as "My mother is a good mother," left the rest blank, and closed the book.

Next came an interview with the doctor. When asked why she had not answered most of the questions she replied that she considered such matters to be none of the Agency's business, since they dealt with neither her qualifications nor her loyalty, nor did they have any particular bearing on her moral character.

This interview she described as one of long silences, interrupted by such remarks from the doctor as, "I see you're a Catholic. Do you ever hear voices, see visions?"

He wanted to know how she squared her moral principles with her sex drive, and how she fared romantically. Just to please him she made up a romance in Paris. She was sent back to Personnel; and several weeks later, to her surprise, she was told that she had the job.

The Agency flew her from her home in California to Washington where she met her instructors and was ready to start training. But, oops, there came word from the medical section that she hadn't answered all the questions. She said that if the job depended on answering questions she considered offensive, then she didn't want the job. Next was a chat with yet another brain-watcher, who prescribed two more days of tests.

Mrs. Zola could figure which were the desired answers. Eventually, however, they wore her down to the point where she balked. When asked what she considered the most important thing in life, she ignored the psychologically-sound answers of sex, money, and friendliness and answered: "Saving my soul." Her inability to draw pictures elicted the doctor's comment: "difficulty depicting human beings."

A third doctor lectured her on her attitude.

Mrs. Zola, a Fulbright scholar, writes of the interview with Doctor Number Three:

". . . did I understand why they were doing this; what did I mean, the tests gave phony results, blah, blah. The doctor's voice rose steadily and at last he fairly shouted, so help me, 'Would you have any respect for us if we let you get away with this?"

The folks in Personnel later told her she "should have lied cooperatively like everybody else."

When word finally came that she was unacceptable, Personnel offered to fly her home to California, or find her another job in Washington.

Mrs. Zola's parting shot answers a question about cost that bureauchiatrists will never include in a test:

"The amount of money the whole thing cost the taxpayers pains one, but wasn't it worth it to have preserved the image of a well-adjusted Agency, free from surly dissidents harping on privacy?"

Most of us today accept testing as "voluntary." Yet even psychiatrists admit that the questions asked on psychological questionnaires are cleverly designed to trap the subject. Through his answers he is led to reveal subconscious attitudes and reactions of which he himself may not be aware. Are we no longer entitled the right to privacy and to our individual personalities?

Here are some sample true-and-false questions taken from psychological and personality tests used by Federal agencies:

.I like to listen to and tell jokes in which sex plays a major part.

.I believe women ought to have as much sexual freedom as men.

.I think Lincoln was greater than Washington.

.Sometimes I am strongly attracted by the personal articles of others, such as shoes, gloves, etc., so that I want to handle or steal them though I have no use for them.

.It takes a lot of argument to convince most people of the truth.

.I have often had to take orders from someone who did not know as much as I did.

.I know who is responsible for most of my troubles.

.I believe there is a Devil and a Hell in afterlife.

As Martin Gross has pointed out, most of the tests being used are unreliable. The Government's use of psychological tests for Federal employees constitutes "one of the most reprehensible invasions of privacy and denial of Constitutional rights extant today," he says.

"We have become a nation of snoopers," charged Representative Gallagher. "Now the magic of the computer is helping to gather such a wealth of information. . . that all of us may some day stand psychologically naked."

The American people are becoming more and more aware of the inroads being made by the privacy invaders; they are becoming more and more concerned over the implications of this invasion; and they are making their feelings known.

House and Senate committees have been at work for some time trying to unravel the often sordid story of privacy invasion via psychological testing and electronic snooping and even snooping into first-class mail without a search warrant. No device is being overlooked, not even the biggest martini olive for cocktail party eavesdropping; but these committees need the support and cooperation of all thoughtful Americans.

RESTLESS DRIVE OF INDUSTRY

Corporate growth has reached almost astronomical proportions. It has been accompanied by increasing concern in many quarters with the inherent dangers of bigness. But, those who have held sincere reservations about industrial growth may find solid comfort in a characteristic of this growth that is typically American - technological change.

The restless searching for a better way to do things that has been the hallmark of progress in this country is, if anything, more pronounced today than ever before. In a hundred years or so, we have come from the covered wagon to the supersonic jet. Major industries of a century ago are as extinct as the Passenger Pigeon. No one really knows what life will be like 50 or 100 years from now.

With increasing frequency, we read of such things as the development of a fuel cell power plant, which could conceivably revolutionize the energy business. A recent news release tells of a move by more than a score of gas systems and gas utility companies to push a large-scale research program, looking to the development of just such a power plant that would be practicable and marketable. The program is estimated to cost $20 million, and of course, the aim is to find larger markets for natural gas in competition with other energy industries. Whether the fuel cell is a harbinger of things to come is anyone's guess.

The important thing, so far as the public is concerned, is that the restless drive and competitive urge of industry is very much alive. This is well demonstrated by the gas industry itself, which was a comparative infant a mere decade or so ago.

OLD DISSENTER BUT 100 PCT. LOYAL

If there really are some young people who believe that no one over 30 is to be trusted, they should be two and half times as wary of advice from an octogenarian.

But just on the chance that age and wisdom are not incompatible, they might profitably reflect on some sentiments expressed the other day by Norman Thomas, six-time Socialist party candidate for the presidency, who will be 83 on Nov. 20.

Thomas is nearly blind, is crippled by arthritis and injuries from an automobile accident and suffers from heart trouble and "a catalogue of infirmities."

None of which has anything to do with the functioning of his mind, as evident in what may have been his farewell speech, given before an international conference of students.

"I don't like the sight of young people burning the flag of my country, the country I love," said the elder statesman of American dissenters.

While acidly critical of the administration's handling of the Vietnam war, among other things, Thomas emphasized to the students that he had affection as well as criticism for his country.

Affection for country. This is something modern - day dissenters could display a little more of - not the conventional patriotism that waves the flag and shouts, "My country, right or wrong," but an affection that springs from a deep belief in and loyalty to the ideals on which the nation was founded.

Affection for country. It marks the difference between an old crusader who will go on championing those ideals until his last breath and those whose motto seems to be: "Turn on, drop out and tear down."

HOME TOWN, U.S.A. (AP) -- "Housewives are such utter fools," announced Trellis Mae Peeble, America's most average wife.

When Trellis Mae made a flat statement like that, Wilbur, her husband, knew better than to contradict her. He also knew better than to agree with her outright.

"Uh-uhm," he said noncommittaly.

"Aren't you ever interested in why I think all housewives are utter fools?" demanded Trellis Mae.

"Uh huh," replied her spouse, looking at her warily.

"The reason I think we housewives are such utter fools is that we are all so disorganized -- totally disorganized."

"Oh, I wouldn't say that about you," said Wilbur, glancing around the kitchen. "The place looks pretty spic and span -- or will, anyways, after I finish drying the dishes and you take out the garbage."

"I am not talking about neatness, I am talking about being disorganized."

"Well, if housewives are disorganized," asked Wilbur, still at sea, "just who is organized?"

"The subway workers and bus drivers of New York City -- that's who!" exclaimed Trellis Mae.

"I know you're not going to leave me just standing here wondering," murmured Wilbur. "What's it all about?"

"Well, those transit workers have got a great big union for all. And I just read in the paper they signed a new contract that will get them more money and has new fringers on their old fringe benefits."

"Such as?"

"Well, the big thing is that they can retire at half-pay after spending only 20 years in a nice warm comfortable subway, where they have chances to meet all kinds of interesting people."

BETTER WAYS TO BETTER DAYS

Americans who love their country and are genuninely opposed to communism and socialism have the facts on their side. But the truth can be unpopular and unwelcome, and up to now we have been unable to win many arguments. People who want to change our laws by demonstration or to interpret the law in a way that will permit them to do whatever they please belong on the opposite side from those who cherish freedom.

Left and right of center will have more meaning when we begin thinking of left or right of the "average." The debate between people with the burdensome lable "Conservative" and those who have preempted the very fine title "Liberal" is going badly for freedom. The much-sought-after and highly regarded title, "Moderate," is only a new version of "Middle - of - the-road." Moderates, after all, are those who cannot think through the issues accurately and lack the courage of their convictions to take a stand. Trying to listen to public opinion, they weave back and forth, with little depth and weight.

The lines would be more easily discernible if drawn between those showing love of country who could be called "Constructives," and those who have permitted their thinking to be twisted to such an extent that they are tolerant of communism and crime.

Many ask, "Is there real danger that we will lose our liberty or that the nation will surrender its sovereignty?" If the answer is affirmative, surely everyone must begin doing all that he can to safeguard our future. H.L.H.

ONCE BOTTLES WERE CORKERS

NEW YORK (AP) — Today's wine and beverage bottles have a better standing than their predecessors of 300 years ago.

The Glass Container Manufacturers Institute notes that in the 17th Century wine and "soda water" bottles had rounded bottoms.

Early wine and soda bottles were sealed with corks that had to be kept moist to maintain the seal. The bottles were thus purposely designed so they couldn't stand up, necessitating horizontal storage to keep the corks wet.

Flat-bottom bottles came into popularity in the 19th Century with the development of crown caps.

Sports Corner

By RON JAYNES

Our little devil has returned from his vacation and this prognosticator gladly hands over his magic wands. . .mystic pipes. . . and whatever he's tried to use in calling basketball games. . .

Exiting with a 25 of 35 record for. . . 71 per cent clip. . .We're glad to get out of it. . . .

Here he is. . .our little devil. . .

"Goood evennning" here are tonight's calls:

Poplar Bluff at Dexter -- Let's see. . . The Mules are small and the Bearcats are coming. . .Some ball game this should be. . .Dexter has the home floor advantage. . .but the Mules seem to have a real attack in their 5-9 average. . . We'll go on a long shot and say. . .Dexter by five, Dexter 71, Poplar Bluff 66.

Cape Girardeau Central at Perryville -- How about this. . . another toughie in the SEMO conference. . . Central might make this trip for nothing and we think the Pirates have what it takes to shoot down the Tigers. Perryville 63, Cape Central 58.

Jackson at Kennett -- Maybe the Indians of Kennett have gotten over their recent sickness... If not they'll give it to the visiting tribute tonight. Kennett 82, Jackson 69.

Bloomfield at Advance -- Are the Wildcats on the down grade... Or. . .is Puxico beginning to jell. . .we'll know after tonight's encounter. . .as the Hornets are a comparable team with the Indians. Bloomfield. . .We'll go with you again. Bloomfield 51, Advance 48.

Portageville at Parma -- The Bulldogs are the dark horses in New Madrid county. . .they looked as well as any team can when we have seen them. . .They'll be up for this match for former Parma coach Dale Harrison. . who is now their coach. Portageville 78, Parma 61.

Oran at St. Henry -- No need to go into detail. . .is there? Oran 99, St. Henry 71.

Richland at Bell City -- We understand that Willie Jones is back with the Rebels. . .and that should mean an extra 18 rebounds and 15 points. . .enough for the Rebels to add to the scoring of Williamson, Fowler and Brown. . .Brown. Richland 84, Bell City 61.

New Madrid at Morehouse -- Maybe the long vacation has helped both ball clubs. . . It'll be the Indians over the Tigers. New Madrid 75, Morehouse 56.

East Prairie at Chaffee -- This should be a real "barn burner" or gym burner. . .or whatever. . .it'll be one heck of a game. . .We'll have to go with the Red Devils... Chaffee 65, East Prairie 54.

Delta C-6 at Hayti North -- Another spicy game. . .Coach Norman Nelson's crew has had a rest. . .and might be hungry for a victory. Delta's Chargers finished off a week of basketball with third place at Senath-Hornersville last week. Let's go with Hayti. . .Hayti North 71, Delta C-7 67. Neelyville, Caruthersville, Bernie, Patton, Malden, Cooter Fisk and Illmo-Scott City will win in other action.

Scott Central at Delta -- We almost forgot about this match . . .Delta seems to be the only team to have placed close to the Braves in the past week. . .They'll have the home court advantage... but they'll go down to defeat. Scott Central has balance. . .and most important a good coach. Scott Central 70, Delta 66.

Johnson, LeGrand Pace Oran Attack

ORAN--Changing his offensive pattern to get a better out front attack, Coach Gene Bess' Oran Eagles got just that and its 15th basketball win of the season as they whipped past powerful Notre Dame of Cape Girardeau, 76-66 last night.

With the changing of the pattern of which he moved star forward Fred Johnson to the key position at the top of the free throw cirlce, the six foot right hander bombed in 20 points and made the difference. The Eagles pasted third ranked Notre Dame after the Bulldogs' junior varsity team came from behind to overhaul the Eagles' junior varsity 46-33.

Oran got a 20-point performance from sophomore Rodney LeGrand, who dropped in the majority of his points at the charity line, where he hit four straight in the final period to cinch the game.

The contest was much closer than the score indicates. Notre Dame pulled to within two points with 30 seconds remaining but desperation fouls forced the Eagles to the charity line, where they notched six points in the final 30 seconds.

Oran's push almost ended as the Notre Dame unit opened up from out court in the second half and ripped in baskets from the 20-foot range. Oran spent most of its time at the charity line in the first half. There it connected on 20 of 23 attempts.

All-stater Greg Flaker of the Bulldogs kept the nets warm all night netting 19 points in the first half and ending the game with 27, the majority on free throws. The ace - righthander drew a cold hand from the field.

Notre Dame, playing with its star forward, Dave Halter, for the first time in a pair of weeks got 12 points from the 6-3 star and 14 rebounds.

Oran took 67 shots from the field and connected on 44 per cent of them. Notre Dame hit at a 52 per cent clip but took only 52 field shots.

Both teams found themselves in foul trouble in the first half. Oran quickly overcame that problem. It drew only one personal in the third period and four in the fourth after drawing 13 in the first half.

Notre Dame stayed in the game in the first half due mostly to its free throw accuracy. The Bulldogs hit only eight field shots in the first half but had to open up from out-court in the second half. They ripped in seven the third period.

Coach Bess felt that his team hustled better and moved better on defense than it had all season and said he was well satisfied with his offensive change.

Don Evans, a six-foot sophomore, grabbed 13 of the 41 rebounds of the Eagles to lead in that department.

Warn South

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — The North is loaded with all-star football players, but the South has been warned to beware in particular in Saturday's Senior Bowl game of defensive back Dick Anderson of Colorado.

"You've never seen anything like him," South Coach Hank Stram of the Kansas City Chiefs was warned Thursday night by Georgia Coach Vince Dooley, who watched Anderson beat his South team in the Blue-Gray game a week ago.

"He's got more moves than anything I've ever seen," Dooley told Stram after watching Anderson return punts for 62 and 69 yards in a winning comeback.

Stram, coaching his first all-star team after sending the Chiefs into the Super Bowl a year ago, said he has been impressed by all of the players in the game which starts at 2 p.m. EST and will be televised nationally by NBC.

The South will be counting on the passing of Florida State's Kim Hammond and Tennessee's Dewey Warren to carry Dixie to victory and snap the region out of a holiday slump in which it has won but one of nine bowl and all-star games.

The North is counting on the passing of Paul Toscano of Wyoming and John Schneider of Toledo to carry it to the Yankees' second straight victory.

The North will be out to narrow the series margin in the 19th annual game in which the South takes a 11-6-1 edge. A capacity crowd of more than 40,000 is expected.

Princeton's Chris Thomforde is thinking about being a missionary, maybe in a big city, he says. Lou Rossini wishes he'd find some nice, small out-of-the way place where NYU is never likely to play basketball.

After a fairly erratic first half Thursday night, Thomforde came on strong to lead the Tigers to a 78-62 triumph over Rossini's Violets and make Princeton's return to Madison Square Garden after a three-year absence a happy one.

Thomforde, a rangy blond, said he is seriously considering a career as a missionary and probably in a large town, where he says people and their problems are. But Thursday, his 21 points and 10 rebounds made more than enough problems to last NYU for a while.

Eighth-ranked Oklahoma City, the only member of the Top Ten that played Thursday night, lost to Nevada Southern 96-92 in Las Vegas. The setback was the Chiefs' first of the season after eight victories. NSU is 9-3.

Nevada Southern scored eight straight points in the final minute of play after trailing 90-88. Curtis Watson stole the ball from OCU's Ron Koper to tie the game and seconds later Watson came up with another steal and the go-ahead basket.

Oklahoma City overcame a 47-42 halftime deficit and led by as much as eight points— 87-46 with eight minutes to play before Nevada Southern launched its comeback.

Elburt Miller topped the Rebels with 32 points and Don Lyons added 28. Ron Koper was high for the Chiefs with 24.

Long Island University, No. 3 in the small-college rankings, won its 11th straight game, disposing of Seton Hall 53-47. Cliff Culuko scored 21 points for the Blackbirds.

Louisville, getting 18 points from West Unseld and 18 from Jerry King, won its second Missouri Valley Conference game, topping Tulsa 65-59 on the road.

Bradley won its third MVC game, beating Wichita State 104-92 behind Joe Allen's 26 points.

Cincinnati opened its Missouri Valley season with a 61-53 triumph over North Texas State. Rick Roberson scored 14 points and pulled in 23 rebounds.

In other games, the Citadel beat Loyola of New Orleans 61-59, St. John's whipped Syracuse 79-58, Rutgers beat Dartmouth 79-52 and Utah State beat American U. 94-78.

Our little devil has returned from his vacation and this prognosticator gladly hands over his magic wands. . .mystic pipes. . . and whatever he's tried to use in calling basketball games. . .

Exiting with a 25 of 35 record for. . . 71 per cent clip. . .We're glad to get out of it. . . .

Here he is. . . our little devil. . . "Goood evennning" here are tonight's calls:

Poplar Bluff at Dexter--Let's see. . . The Mules are small and the Bearcats are coming. . .Some ball game this should be. . .Dexter has the home floor advantage. . .but the Mules seem to have a real attack in their 5-9 average. . . We'll go on a long shot and say. . .Dexter by five, Dexter 71, Poplar Bluff 66.

Cape Girardeau Central at Perryville -- How about this. . . another toughie in the SEMO conference. . . Central might make this trip for nothing and we think the Pirates have what it takes to shoot down the Tigers. Perryville 63, Cape Central 58.

Jackson at Kennett -- Maybe the Indians of Kennett have gotten over their recent sickness... If not they'll give it to the visiting tribute tonight. Kennett 82, Jackson 69.

Bloomfield at Advance -- Are the Wildcats on the downgrade... Or. . .is Puxico beginning to jell. . .we'll know after tonight's encounter. . .as the Hornets are a comparable team with the Indians. Bloomfield. . .We'll go with you again. Bloomfield 51, Advance 48.

Portageville at Parma -- The Bulldogs are the dark horses in New Madrid county. . .they looked as well as any team can when we have seen them. . .They'll be up for this match for former Parma coach Dale Harrison. . who is now their coach. Portageville 78, Parma 61.

Oran at St. Henry -- No need to go into detail. . .is there? Oran 99, St. Henry 71.

Richland at Bell City -- We understand that Willie Jones is back with the Rebels. . .and that should mean an extra 18 rebounds and 15 points. . .enough for the Rebels to add to the scoring of Williamson, Fowler and Brown. . .Brown. Richland 84, Bell City 61.

New Madrid at Morehouse -- Maybe the long vacation has helped both ball clubs. . . It'll be the Indians over the Tigers. New Madrid 75, Morehouse 56.

East Prairie at Chaffee -- This should be a real "barn burner" or gym burner. . .or whatever. . .it'll be one heck of a game. . .We'll have to go with the Red Devils... Chaffee 65, East Prairie 54.

Delta C-6 at Hayti North--Another spicy game. . .Coach Norman Nelson's crew has had a rest. . .and might be hungry for a victory. Delta's Chargers finished off a week of basketball with third place at Senath-Hornersville last week. Let's go with Hayti. . .Hayti North 71, Delta C-7 67. Neelyville, Caruthersville, Bernie, Patton, Malden, Cooter Fisk and Illmo-Scott City will win in other action.

Scott Central at Delta -- We almost forgot about this match . . .Delta seems to be the only team to have placed close to the Braves in the past week. . .They'll have the home court advantage... but they'll go down to defeat. Scott Central has balance. . .and most important a good coach. Scott Central 70, Delta 66.

Johnson, LeGrand Pace Oran Attack

ORAN--Changing his offensive pattern to get a better out front attack, Coach Gene Bess' Oran Eagles got just that and its 15th basketball win of the season as they whipped past powerful Notre Dame of Cape Girardeau, 76-66 last night.

With the changing of the pattern of which he moved star forward Fred Johnson to the key position at the top of the free throw cirlce, the six foot right hander bombed in 20 points and made the difference. The Eagles pasted third ranked Notre Dame after the Bulldogs' junior varsity team came from behind to overhaul the Eagles' junior varsity 46-33.

Oran got a 20-point performance from sophomore Rodney LeGrand, who dropped in the majority of his points at the charity line, where he hit four straight in the final period to cinch the game.

The contest was much closer than the score indicates. Notre Dame pulled to within two points with 30 seconds remaining but desperation fouls forced the Eagles to the charity line, where they notched six points in the final 30 seconds.

Oran's push almost ended as the Notre Dame unit opened up from out court in the second half and ripped in baskets from the 20-foot range. Oran spent most of its time at the charity line in the first half. There it connected on 20 of 23 attempts.

All-stater Greg Flaker of the Bulldogs kept the nets warm all night netting 19 points in the first half and ending the game with 27, the majority on free throws. The ace - righthander drew a cold hand from the field.

Notre Dame, playing with its star forward, Dave Halter, for the first time in a pair of weeks got 12 points from the 6-3 star and 14 rebounds.

Oran took 67 shots from the field and connected on 44 per cent of them. Notre Dame hit at a 52 per cent clip but took only 52 field shots.

Both teams found themselves in foul trouble in the first half. Oran quickly overcame that problem. It drew only one personal in the third period and four in the fourth after drawing 13 in the first half.

Hearnes Urged to Include Public Defender Measure

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP) — Among the proposals Gov. Warren E. Hearnes is being urged to include in his call to the Missouri Legislature for a special session is a public defender bill.

It would establish 21 public defender districts in the state. About seven would operate full-time, with salaried defenders, assistants and other staff members. In the other areas — with 100,000 or less population each — it is proposed that a commission composed of members of the Missouri Bar and non-lawyer members be set up to control assignments for legal cases.

The proposed bill is sponsored by the Missouri Bar, according to its executive director, Wade F. Baker, and State Sen. Richard F. Southern, D-Monroe City.

It is similar to a measure sponsored at the legislature's last session by Rep. Harold Volkmer, D-Hannibal. It died in the Senate when the legislature adjourned.

Director Baker says: "Since the United State Supreme Court has provided for legal assistance to be made available to indigents accused of crimes, it is the bar's position that this is now a responsibility of society and not just the responsibility of the legal profession."

In each of the 21 districts the defender's office would be controlled by a commission of five persons, with the lawyer members assigned or appointed by the Missouri Bar Association and the nonlawyer member appointed by the governor. Commission members would receive expenses but no salary.

The cases covered by the proposed law would be felony cases, misdemeanors and juvenile cases, but municipal cases would not be included.

The sponsors say the work load of appointed attorneys has increased greatly as a result of the U.S. Supreme Court's so-called "Miranda decision," making it mandatory that every accused person be notified upon his arrest as to his constitutional rights, the charge against him and his right to an attorney — at the state's expense — if he is unable to afford an attorney himself.

It has been traditional in Missouri to have court-appointed attorneys serve without fees, the sponsors explain. They say the expenses of these attorneys are increasing because of the introduction of new defense tactics in the past three years.

Hemispheric Travel Exemption Clarified

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson's exemption of Western Hemisphere nations from his appeal that Americans not travel abroad is based on solid economic foundations, say key administration sources.

They said present administration thinking is to continue that exemption when and if restrictive measures— such as a head tax or a tax based on the number of days spent abroad— are adopted to discourage overseas travel.

One source said the basic rationale behind the exemption is that money spent by U.S. tourists in other Western Hemisphere countries eventually returns in one form or another— increased travel to the United States or export sales and services, for example.

In outlining on New Year's Day his program to stem the U.S. dollar drain, President Johnson appealed for Americans to "defer for the next two years all nonessential travel outside the Western Hemisphere."

He added: "Im asking the secretary of the Treasury to explore with appropriate congressional committees legislation to help achieve this objective."

One key official cited this sentence as proof that if more restrictions on travel are adopted the Western Hemisphere will continue to enjoy its exemption.

Although the administration has not legally defined the Western Hemisphere for purposes of the President's appeal, officials said Bermuda, the Bahamas and the West Indies generally are considered part of the hemisphere.

In fact, one source said another factor in the exemption is that the departure of American tourists from some of these resort areas could severely hurt the economies there.

The large number of tourists and daily travelers between the United States and Canada and the United States and Mexico was cited as another reason for the exemption. One source said the headaches in administering a travel ban with Canada and Mexico would be phenomenal if not impossible.

One of the major reasons the United States has traditionally enjoyed a favorable trade balance has been its extensive export trade with both border neighbors. Canada and Mexico are the best U.S. export customers and this country is the best customer for their exports.

Way to Unclog Pipeline to Congress Puzzles Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP) — As President Johnson prepares for the battles of 1968 one problem he must ponder beside the banks of the Pedernales is the short-circuit in his dealings with Congress.

Ironic, too, for legend has it that Lyndon B. Johnson is another Merlin the Magician in knowing which Capitol Hill buttons to push and how hard to push them.

But if he is to live up to his reputation in this critical year — and it is probably impossible — Johnson will have to find his missing wizard's wand.

Last year the President not only failed to bewitch Congress but found his biggest troublemakers in the ranks of his own party on Capitol Hill . . . Sen. J. W. Fulbright, Rep. Wilbur D. Mills and Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy -all are Democrats who promise to haunt Johnson in the paramount concerns of 1968— Vietnam, fiscal policy and politics.

There is no magic formula for dealing with such differences. And the breaks in Johnson's relationships with Fulbright and McCarthy appear beyond repair.

But in the broader range of communications, there were persistent mutterings last year, particularly from the House, that liaison between the White House and Capitol had become frayed or even severed.

For Johnson the need for a smooth White House-Capitol operation is more urgent this year. He will have to run with Congress' record this election year.

The late President John F. Kennedy inaugurated the White House-Capitol liaison staff and installed Lawrence F. O'Brien as its Machiavelli.

It can be a tedius craft, keeping the pipelines open between Congress and the executive department.

It involves plotting legislative strategy, dawn-to-dusk patroling of Capitol hallways and repeated telephone calls to size up sentiment or coax it in another direction, knowing the key men on vital issues and what they want.

Under O'Brien the craft became a fine art.

Last year, almost two years after Johnson gave O'Brien the additional job of postmaster general, the muttering started.

There were complaints of bad timing on legislation, faulty efforts to sample sentiment, unanswered telephone calls, lack of aggressiveness and so on.

Polly's Pointers

Spray-Painting Leather, Plastic Requires Caution

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Agnes can purchase a commercial product that is made especially for spray-painting leather, vinyl and plastic furniture. Be sure you get the right one as there is one for regular fabrics, too. I used it on a large footstool and was quite proud of the result. Most paint, hardware or discount stores sell this.

I do hope Polly's Pointers keep going forever as they are so helpful in keeping house.—LUCILLE.

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Agnes that several years ago I painted the leather seats in my 1939 car Chinese red. I used a rubber-base paint and the result was a very fine job. First I washed the seats with warm water and soap. When dry, I dabbed all the cracks in the leather with paint and let dry. Then the seats were completely painted and allowed to dry for two days. I used them for four years and they looked good when I traded the car in.

(Polly's note—This sounds logical from experiences we have had with such paint, but do experiment first to get reaction.)

One lady was having trouble with streaks and smears on her windows after washing. NEVER wash windows when the sun is shining on them, but always when they are in the shade. She may be living in an area where there might be a commercial plant emitting greasy smoke which clings to windows and causes smears. In this event, use a lukewarm detergent-water solution and then rinse with the garden hose. After they are dry, apply your regular window cleaner, use paper towels for wiping and I feel sure you will be satisfied with the result.—JO

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—Does anyone know of a sleek, easy way to clean wood-finished kitchen cupboards and doors without smearing them? All the detergents and household cleaners I have used make them streaked looking. —MRS. C. V. O.

DEAR POLLY—After a pencil becomes too short to sharpen or use comfortably, it is good for use in compasses used for drawing circles.

I plan to build a home when I become older, so when I see an interesting house plan in a magazine or newspaper, I cut it out and save it. By the time I am old enough to build, I will have a nice collection.—MARK

DEAR READERS—Mark's last Pointer is a good suggestion for all who hope to build a house, even though it may be well into the future. Frequent reviewing of the clippings will result in discarding some as time goes on and one develops a definite taste pattern. Time, money and disappointment may be saved if we know what we really want and like.—POLLY

Polly's Pointers

Spray-Painting Leather, Plastic Requires Caution

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—Agnes can purchase a commercial product that is made especially for spray-painting leather, vinyl and plastic furniture. Be sure you get the right one as there is one for regular fabrics, too. I used it on a large footstool and was quite proud of the result. Most paint, hardware or discount stores sell this.

I do hope Polly's Pointers keep going forever as they are so helpful in keeping house.—LUCILLE.

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Agnes that several years ago I painted the leather seats in my 1939 car Chinese red. I used a rubber-base paint and the result was a very fine job. First I washed the seats with warm water and soap. When dry, I dabbed all the cracks in the leather with paint and let dry. Then the seats were completely painted and allowed to dry for two days. I used them for four years and they looked good when I traded the car in.

(Polly's note—This sounds logical from experiences we have had with such paint, but do experiment first to get reaction.)

One lady was having trouble with streaks and smears on her windows after washing. NEVER wash windows when the sun is shining on them, but always when they are in the shade. She may be living in an area where there might be a commercial plant emitting greasy smoke which clings to windows and causes smears. In this event, use a lukewarm detergent-water solution and then rinse with the garden hose. After they are dry, apply your regular window cleaner, use paper towels for wiping and I feel sure you will be satisfied with the result.—JO

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—Does anyone know of a sleek, easy way to clean wood-finished kitchen cupboards and doors without smearing them? All the detergents and household cleaners I have used make them streaked looking. —MRS. C. V. O.

DEAR POLLY—After a pencil becomes too short to sharpen or use comfortably, it is good for use in compasses used for drawing circles.

I plan to build a home when I become older, so when I see an interesting house plan in a magazine or newspaper, I cut it out and save it. By the time I am old enough to build, I will have a nice collection.—MARK

DEAR READERS—Mark's last Pointer is a good suggestion for all who hope to build a house, even though it may be well into the future. Frequent reviewing of the clippings will result in discarding some as time goes on and one develops a definite taste pattern. Time, money and disappointment may be saved if we know what we really want and like.—POLLY

NEW YORK (AP) — The usual scientific expedition sets forth on a mission with a photographer— sometimes a part-time photographer— to get whatever pictures he can without interfering with work in progress. The resulting record is strictly a by-product.

But in the making of "Sharks," an hour-long television program which is the first of a dozen or so undersea programs, the photographer is the important man of the project. The series is an account of the work of Jacques-Yves Cousteau, explorer of the deep, scientist, inventor of the aqualung and writer. The series will be shown on ABC, the the first will be broadcast next Monday night.

"The expedition was planned primarily to make the series— and was paid for by the television series," said its chief cameraman, Philippe Cousteau, 26-year-old son of the leader. "As far as I know it is the first time television has financed a scientific project. And it is the first time, in my experience, that the photographer was not considered a sort of necessary nuisance.

The making of the series will take five years— it started last February— and will explore all sorts of subjects from ocean floor treasure hunts to underwater agriculture. Most of the work is done from the ship Calypso, an old American minesweeper converted into an ocean-going laboratory.

Young Cousteau, an expert diver and a recognized specialist in undersea photography, participated with his father and a crew of 30 expert divers and scientists filming and observing sharks in the Red Sea, Indian Ocean and Gulf of Aden— and was very relieved when the assignment was safely over.

Sharks, he said, are really as dangerous and unpredictable as they are reputed to be.

"After a while, we learned to feel the atmosphere— to know when it seemed safe to go out of our cage to work. And other times when it was not safe," he said. "But I think it was good that we finished without trouble because I think perhaps we were getting overconfident."

In the course of filming the shark program, they experimented with various repellents and devices to protect victims from the ferocious fish. A frightening but rewarding experience was filming the terrifying sight of a shark "feeding frenzy," when the creature tore into wounded fish, even other sharks.

Philippe Cousteau, who attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology for awhile, was in the United States briefly en route to Baja California to start filming another program in the series, this one about gray whales who go to one lagoon on the Pacific Coast to have their young— and teach them how to swim.

McCarthy Longs for Kennedy Support

WASHINGTON (AP — Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy believes a word of support from a Kennedy — almost any Kennedy— would be a big help to his challenge to President Johnson in several presidential primaries.

McCarthy is known to have voiced dissatisfaction because no such words have been forthcoming from either Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D.N.Y., or Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D.Mass.

Like the Minnesota Democrat, both Senators Kennedy have been critical of Johnson's policy in the Vietnam war. But neither has done anything to align himself politically with McCarthy on that issue.

Sources familiar with McCarthy's view said he feels the two Kennedys are perhaps the only congressional colleagues whose support would bolster his campaign, particularly in the New Hampshire and Massachusetts primaries.

Other men who would seem to be likely allies also have been silent. But many of them are running for re-election next year— men like Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D.Ark., and Wayne Morse, D.Ore.

McCarthy, it was said, understands their position, and feels that their endorsement would be unlikely to have much impact anyhow.

The Minnesota senator also is known to be concerned about building momentum for his campaign. "You can't just fade away," he remarked to one visitor. This is believed to be a key factor in his decision to enter the year's opening primary, the New Hampshire race on March 12.

To campaign there, he dropped a planned trip to Vietnam this winter. Candidate tours of the war zone are being overdone, he feels.

On that point, McCarthy cites the experience of Michigan Gov. George Romney, a Republican candidate for the presidency, who harvested adverse publicity during a year-end trip to Vietnam.

The New Hampshire campaign offers McCarthy an opportunity to get his presidential challenge moving, although he acknowledges it will be a very tough race.

1-Cent Stamp Demand to Rise Sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Post Office Department, anticipating a heavy demand for one-cent stamps when the cost of mailing a letter jumps to six cents Sunday, says it has 1.4 billion penny stamps on hand to help Americans use up their five-cent stamps.

The Post Office began stockpiling one-cent stamps last September when Congress started considering the department's proposal to hike the cost of mailing a letter from five to six cents— the third postal-rate increase in 10 years.

The department also has been working around the clock producing six-cent stamps— all bearing the profile of former President Franklin D. Roosevelt. It has about four billion of these.

But the early demand is expected to be for penny stamps since there probably will be lots of fives still around when the rates go up Sunday.

Most of the 1.4 billion one-cent stamps— green and bearing a picture of Andrew Jackson— are stored in an auditorium at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in Washington. The department also has a few smaller stockpiles strategically located in five other cities: San Francisco, Dallas, Cincinnati, Chicago and New York.

The Post Office's Bureau of Facilities estimates the department will need about two billion one-cent stamps to meet the needs of customers when the postal hike takes effect. To meet the demand, a spokesman said, government printers are "working 24 hours a day, shipping seven days a week— and we don't anticipate any shortages."

The Post Office also is issuing a new one-cent stamp Jan. 12 with a picture of Thomas Jefferson on it.

Six cents' postage will be required on letters postmarked Jan. 7. Letters postmarked later and bearing only five cents postage will not be returned to the sender, but will be forwarded to the addressee— possibly accompanied by a request for one-cent postage due.

Postal officials were not certain whether all letters carriers will demand the penny postage due on all letters postmarked Sunday and bearing only five cents postage. One official suggested it might cost the Post Office more than it will receive just to collect the penny due on all letters.

Here are the new rates:

First-class letters will go up from 5 to 6 cents an ounce; airmail letters from 8 to 10 cents an ounce; postal cards from 4 to 5 cents each; airmail cards from 6 to 8 cents each.

Second-class mail rates— mostly newspapers and magazines— will be increased about 24 per cent. Bulk third-class mail— mostly advertising circulars— will go up 34 per cent.

The increases will yield about $900 million a year in additional revenue.

'Parents Generally Right,' College Students Discover

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)

If a four-year study of Stanford and University of California students is correct, this student generation does a great deal of worrying.

A thousand seniors at the two schools were questioned on how often they have felt depressed in the past few years. Half the senior men and two-thirds the senior women reported periods of depression as occurring an astounding "few times a week" to "a few times a month."

Something around three-fourths of the students said that in their senior year they had felt physically out of sorts between once and five times a month on the average.

To most, "old age," meaning the years after 50, looked pretty bleak. Between a quarter and a third of the senior students said they believed that the people are happiest during their first six years of life and a third thought the happiest time was from 22 to 25. Only one out of seven chose the years after 36. Less than 3 per cent opted for any time after 50.

Most of the senior students questioned seemed to feel they got more out of their associations with other students, than they did from their professors, their studies or their textbooks.

In fact, the survey found evidence that college has less impact on students' intellectual development than on their social attitudes.

Only about one senior student out of seven believed he had "increased intellectual activity and curiosity" as a result of his four years in college. The most often mentioned changes were "more self-confidence, poise and independence and more stability.

The single most meaningful experience of the college years most often checked was "love, marriage or conjugal family."

Between half and two-thirds of the women seniors and 30 to 40 per cent of the senior men thought that close relations with friends of the opposite sex had done a great deal to change them. A third of the men and a third to a half of the women seniors thought that close relations with friends of the same sex had had done much to change them.

By contrast, only about a fourth of the students felt that ideas presented in courses or by teachers had had "much" influence in causing the change that had taken place in their way of thinking or acting in the four years of college. Half thought the teachers and courses had had a "moderate" influence.

Looking at the changes students saw in themselves from another viewpoint, the seniors reported that being away from home had had considerable influence. One of the major factors causing them to change since their freshman year, about half the seniors felt was "confrontation with problems and conflicts in myself."

Apparently most of the students had not turned to their professors for solutions to these problems and conflicts.

Despite this inner conflict, somewhat over half the seniors believed that "in the final analysis, parents generally turn out to be right about things."

This, after all, is quite a compliment for parents in this day and age.

Blacksmith Quits After 59 Years at Vanishing Trade

CARTHAGE, Mo. (AP) — Much of the history made in the largest gray marble quarry in the world was witnessed by a Carthage Marble Corp., blacksmith who retires today after 59 years in the almost forgotten trade.

Ray Erwin, 75, rural Carthage was the guest at an informal party given by his fellow workers during his last day in the machine shop.

The veteran blacksmith commented "You know, I really hate to quit working, but I decided I would quit while I'm still in pretty good physical shape."

Erwin, who was born near Ash Grove, worked the summer of 1908 at the age of 15 as a blacksmith's helper under his father, who had started working at the trade in 1903 at a quarry 18 miles north of Springfield. Later the family moved to Carthage.

"I started working full-time at 10 hours a day, six days a week for $1.25 a day," Erwin said. "My father, the regular blacksmith, drew a salary of $2.50 a day."

"When I started working with the Carthage Marble and Limestone Co. in 1908, the marble was cut with a steam-powered channeling machine," he recalled. "Everything has changed to electricity instead of steam."

Erwin's job for 59 years was sharpening the steel cutters of the channeling machines.

Carthage long has been known as the world's primary source of gray marble. The industry was launched here in 1885 with one quarry. By the turn of the century there were seven. The operations were merged into what is now the Carthage Marble Corp. It also has marble operations near Ash Grove and at Batesville, Ark.

"Most of the marble sold today is for interior use," the blacksmith said. "Large polishing and cutting facilities have been added here for work on over 100 different types of marble, primarily to be used in the interiors of buildings. When I started work we hauled nothing but rough-cut Carthage marble by rail for exterior use."

A primary example of Carthage marble for exterior use can be seen in the Jasper County courthouse in Carthage. The building was constructed in 1895. Carthage marble also was used in construction of the state capitol at Jefferson City.

Erwin also noted early day quarry workers used picks, shovels and horse-drawn wagons to remove dirt and debris covering the three layers of marble. Now crews move thousands of tons more per day with power equipment.

The corporation president, Roy E. Mayes Sr., said "Ray has been a faithful employe here for many years and we hate to see him leave. He has been a close friend of mine and everybody here at the plant."

Before leaving the blacksmith shop, Erwin bent over and picked up a large hammer. He went over to an anvil and stood there looking down.

"You know," he said, "I expect this anvil has been in the shop as long as I have and it hasn't worn much. It will be here for a long time."

His fellow workers say the memory of Erwin's presence will be there just as surely as the rugged anvil which serves as a symbol of more than half a century of honest toil.

Music Hall Change of Pace Works

NEW YORK (AP) — "Music Hall," NBC's weekly Wednesday night variety show, tried something different this week and, as most programs in this series do, it turned out very well. There were three musical acts, each vastly different from the other, and each in turn had many minutes in the spotlight.

First there was Nancy Wilson, an attractive young singer, in an assortment of night-club type songs.

Then there was Victor Borge, who as usual was vastly amusing as he clowned in familiar style around the keyboard and, also as usual, never quite satisfied the audience's desire to hear him play the piano more. And he plays the piano superbly.

Perhaps most impressive of all was the young team of Simon and Garfunkel who sang, for the most part, their own haunting bittersweet ballads.

Only at the very end were the stars together on stage, and then for a few lines of a song. It was all very effective. The settings were handsome and the mood quiet and easy.

Simon and Garfunkel are just one of many young performers who are currently enchanting audiences of all ages. They are two earnest young men who, without any props except Simon's guitar, can climb on any makeshift stage or stand in the center of an elaborate TV set and weave their musical spell.

Peter Noone, whose Herman's Hermits will be seen in a half hour musical documentary next Tuesday night on NBC, remarked recently that although the Beatles are generally credited with opening up the field for young musicians and launching the new sounds and new beats, it was really kicked off by Englishmen inspired by America's Elvis Presley, then an international rage among the teenagers.

"The sound really started as an American sound," said the 20-year-old Noone who is the Herman of the British quartet. Presley even started the mod look— remember his long hair and sideburns? Most of us stuck with instruments like the guitar, drums, bass and piano because we couldn't afford to have somebody like a saxophone player who couldn't sing and play."

Noone was 15 when with some Manchester schoolmates he formed a singing group. They performed in small clubs and gatherings around the English city "trying to pick up a few bob wherever we could."

"Pete Novak and the Heartbeats"— Noone then was Novak — became Herman's Hermits "because we decided to find the most unusual name in the world. What the name did not achieve, one hit record did. Now the boys comprise one of the best known groups, travel the world, play to jammed audiences and, not incidentally, make a lot of money.

Noone and his fellow musicians will be seen in a half-hour television show Tuesday which is made the easy way. A crew and cameras merely photographed Herman and the Hermits at work one night last fall when they were giving a concert for 40,000 at the Ohio State Fair. Then the film was edited to fit the time spot.

"We didn't have to do anything about it," Noone said, "not even fuss about makeup or clothes."

Each town in Spain has a patron saint and on Saint's Day the people join in a fiesta celebration.

Four candidates for the presidency in 1824 resulted in the election being decided by the House of Representatives. Andrew Jackson got the most votes but did not have a plurality and John Quincy Adams was declared the winner by the House vote.

Woodcutter Gives up Fight To Keep Land

ROUND MOUNTAIN, Calif. (AP) — The lonely battle of Virgil Gray vs. the U.S. government apparently is over.

Armed with shotguns and rifles, Gray for two months has held up completion of a $700 million, 900-mile power network feeding electricity from Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River to Southern California.

U.S. marshals and surveyors were run off the 40 acres on which the defiant woodcutter and his family of nine live 250 miles northeast of San Francisco.

Then, with federal officers ready Thursday to invade Gray's cabin en masse and take him into custody, he let his son talk about a compromise.

The decision may have been based mostly on the mumps. Two of Gray's seven children were in bed with that sickness this week. He said, "I don't want to see those little kids hurt."

His wife Jane and their eldest child, Ronald, 20, convinced the 53-year-old Gray that the demands of the federal government supercede his personal property rights.

Rodney Hamblin, deputy U.S. attorney in San Francisco assigned to the case, said Ronald agreed to be the go-between with his father.

Hamblin said the son told him the original offer of $100 an acre for the part of the 40-acre farm needed for the power line right-of-way wasn't good enough, and the path also cuts across "the only good field we have."

Hamblin said "I made him a very liberal offer" this time and asked the son to ask his father to think about it.

Virgil Gray said he probably would give in if the government would provide enough money to give all his children the education Ronald is getting at Shasta College in Redding.

"A man can't do his work, can't get his wood cut, bothered all the time by men from the government," he said.

"I don't want the power line on my land. I don't want the government's money. All I want is to be let alone."

Number Killed In War Rose During Truce

SAIGON (AP) — The number of Americans killed in the Vietnam War increased during Christmas week despite ceasefires proclaimed by both sides, but the number of wounded dropped sharply, the U.S. Command reported today.

South Vietnamese government casualties decreased slightly, the number of enemy killed dropped, but those of other allied forces increased over the totals reported the week before.

The U.S. Command said 185 Americans were killed in action last week, compared with 166 the week before. The number of wounded was 437 last week, compared with 1,361 the previous week.

Of the 437 wounded, the U.S. Command said, 130 did not require hospitalization.

The new totals raised to 15,997 the number of Americans killed in action in the Vietnam war and the number of wounded to 99,742. Another 878 Americans are listed as missing or captured.

More than half the American combat casualties were recorded in 1967: 9,353 killed and 72,209 wounded.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported 227 government troops killed last week, 556 wounded and 63 missing. The previous week 234 were reported killed, 629 wounded and 26 missing.

Other allied forces reported 37 men killed last week and 47 wounded, compared with 20 killed and 34 wounded a week earlier. None was listed as missing.

TV Series to Film Scientific Project

NEW YORK (AP) — The usual scientific expedition sets forth on a mission with a photographer— sometimes a part-time photographer— to get whatever pictures he can without interfering with work in progress. The resulting record is strictly a by-product.

But in the making of "Sharks," an hour-long television program which is the first of a dozen or so undersea programs, the photographer is the important man of the project. The series is an account of the work of Jacques-Yves Cousteau, explorer of the deep, scientist, inventor of the aqualung and writer. The series will be shown on ABC, the the first will be broadcast next Monday night.

"The expedition was planned primarily to make the series— and was paid for by the television series," said its chief cameraman, Philippe Cousteau, 26-year-old son of the leader. "As far as I know it is the first time television has financed a scientific project. And it is the first time, in my experience, that the photographer was not considered a sort of necessary nuisance.

The making of the series will take five years— it started last February— and will explore all sorts of subjects from ocean floor treasure hunts to underwater agriculture. Most of the work is done from the ship Calypso, an old American minesweeper converted into an ocean-going laboratory.

Young Cousteau, an expert diver and a recognized specialist in undersea photography, participated with his father and a crew of 30 expert divers and scientists filming and observing sharks in the Red Sea, Indian Ocean and Gulf of Aden— and was very relieved when the assignment was safely over.

Sharks, he said, are really as dangerous and unpredictable as they are reputed to be.

"After a while, we learned to feel the atmosphere— to know when it seemed safe to go out of our cage to work. And other times when it was not safe," he said. "But I think it was good that we finished without trouble because I think perhaps we were getting overconfident."

In the course of filming the shark program, they experimented with various repellents and devices to protect victims from the ferocious fish. A frightening but rewarding experience was filming the terrifying sight of a shark "feeding frenzy," when the creature tore into wounded fish, even other sharks.

Philippe Cousteau, who attended Massachusetts Institute of Technology for awhile, was in the United States briefly en route to Baja California to start filming another program in the series, this one about gray whales who go to one lagoon on the Pacific Coast to have their young— and teach them how to swim.

McCarthy Longs for Kennedy Support

WASHINGTON (AP — Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy believes a word of support from a Kennedy — almost any Kennedy— would be a big help to his challenge to President Johnson in several presidential primaries.

McCarthy is known to have voiced dissatisfaction because no such words have been forthcoming from either Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D.N.Y., or Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D.Mass.

Like the Minnesota Democrat, both Senators Kennedy have been critical of Johnson's policy in the Vietnam war. But neither has done anything to align himself politically with McCarthy on that issue.

Sources familiar with McCarthy's view said he feels the two Kennedys are perhaps the only congressional colleagues whose support would bolster his campaign, particularly in the New Hampshire and Massachusetts primaries.

Other men who would seem to be likely allies also have been silent. But many of them are running for re-election next year— men like Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D.Ark., and Wayne Morse, D.Ore.

McCarthy, it was said, understands their position, and feels that their endorsement would be unlikely to have much impact anyhow.

The Minnesota senator also is known to be concerned about building momentum for his campaign. "You can't just fade away," he remarked to one visitor. This is believed to be a key factor in his decision to enter the year's opening primary, the New Hampshire race on March 12.

To campaign there, he dropped a planned trip to Vietnam this winter. Candidate tours of the war zone are being overdone, he feels.

On that point, McCarthy cites the experience of Michigan Gov. George Romney, a Republican candidate for the presidency, who harvested adverse publicity during a year-end trip to Vietnam.

The New Hampshire campaign offers McCarthy an opportunity to get his presidential challenge moving, although he acknowledges it will be a very tough race.

1-Cent Stamp Demand to Rise Sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Post Office Department, anticipating a heavy demand for one-cent stamps when the cost of mailing a letter jumps to six cents Sunday, says it has 1.4 billion penny stamps on hand to help Americans use up their five-cent stamps.

The Post Office began stockpiling one-cent stamps last September when Congress started considering the department's proposal to hike the cost of mailing a letter from five to six cents— the third postal-rate increase in 10 years.

The department also has been working around the clock producing six-cent stamps— all bearing the profile of former President Franklin D. Roosevelt. It has about four billion of these.

But the early demand is expected to be for penny stamps since there probably will be lots of fives still around when the rates go up Sunday.

Most of the 1.4 billion one-cent stamps— green and bearing a picture of Andrew Jackson— are stored in an auditorium at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in Washington. The department also has a few smaller stockpiles strategically located in five other cities: San Francisco, Dallas, Cincinnati, Chicago and New York.

The Post Office's Bureau of Facilities estimates the department will need about two billion one-cent stamps to meet the needs of customers when the postal hike takes effect. To meet the demand, a spokesman said, government printers are "working 24 hours a day, shipping seven days a week— and we don't anticipate any shortages."

The Post Office also is issuing a new one-cent stamp Jan. 12 with a picture of Thomas Jefferson on it.

Six cents' postage will be required on letters postmarked Jan. 7. Letters postmarked later and bearing only five cents postage will not be returned to the sender, but will be forwarded to the addressee— possibly accompanied by a request for one-cent postage due.

Postal officials were not certain whether all letters carriers will demand the penny postage due on all letters postmarked Sunday and bearing only five cents postage. One official suggested it might cost the Post Office more than it will receive just to collect the penny due on all letters.

Here are the new rates:

First-class letters will go up from 5 to 6 cents an ounce; airmail letters from 8 to 10 cents an ounce; postal cards from 4 to 5 cents each; airmail cards from 6 to 8 cents each.

Second-class mail rates— mostly newspapers and magazines— will be increased about 24 per cent. Bulk third-class mail— mostly advertising circulars— will go up 34 per cent.

The increases will yield about $900 million a year in additional revenue.

'Parents Generally Right,' College Students Discover

By RAY CROMLEY
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)

If a four-year study of Stanford and University of California students is correct, this student generation does a great deal of worrying.

A thousand seniors at the two schools were questioned on how often they have felt depressed in the past few years. Half the senior men and two-thirds the senior women reported periods of depression as occurring an astounding "few times a week" to "a few times a month."

Something around three-fourths of the students said that in their senior year they had felt physically out of sorts between once and five times a month on the average.

To most, "old age," meaning the years after 50, looked pretty bleak. Between a quarter and a third of the senior students said they believed that the people are happiest during their first six years of life and a third thought the happiest time was from 22 to 25. Only one out of seven chose the years after 36. Less than 3 per cent opted for any time after 50.

Most of the senior students questioned seemed to feel they got more out of their associations with other students, than they did from their professors, their studies or their textbooks.

In fact, the survey found evidence that college has less impact on students' intellectual development than on their social attitudes.

Only about one senior student out of seven believed he had "increased intellectual activity and curiosity" as a result of his four years in college. The most often mentioned changes were "more self-confidence, poise and independence and more stability."

The single most meaningful experience of the college years most often checked was "love, marriage or conjugal family."

Between half and two-thirds of the women seniors and 30 to 40 per cent of the senior men thought that close relations with friends of the opposite sex had done a great deal to change them. A third of the men and a third to a half of the women seniors thought that close relations with friends of the same sex had had done much to change them.

By contrast, only about a fourth of the students felt that ideas presented in courses or by teachers had had "much" influence in causing the change that had taken place in their way of thinking or acting in the four years of college. Half thought the teachers and courses had had a "moderate" influence.

Looking at the changes students saw in themselves from another viewpoint, the seniors reported that being away from home had had considerable influence. One of the major factors causing them to change since their freshman year, about half the seniors felt was "confrontation with problems and conflicts in myself."

Apparently most of the students had not turned to their professors for solutions to these problems and conflicts.

Despite this inner conflict, somewhat over half the seniors believed that "in the final analysis, parents generally turn out to be right about things."

This, after all, is quite a compliment for parents in this day and age.

Blacksmith Quits After 59 Years at Vanishing Trade

CARTHAGE, Mo. (AP) — Much of the history made in the largest gray marble quarry in the world was witnessed by a Carthage Marble Corp., blacksmith who retires today after 59 years in the almost forgotten trade.

Ray Erwin, 75, rural Carthage was the guest at an informal party given by his fellow workers during his last day in the machine shop.

The veteran blacksmith commented "You know, I really hate to quit working, but I decided I would quit while I'm still in pretty good physical shape."

Erwin, who was born near Ash Grove, worked the summer of 1908 at the age of 15 as a blacksmith's helper under his father, who had started working at the trade in 1903 at a quarry 18 miles north of Springfield. Later the family moved to Carthage.

"I started working full-time at 10 hours a day, six days a week for $1.25 a day," Erwin said. "My father, the regular blacksmith, drew a salary of $2.50 a day."

"When I started working with the Carthage Marble and Limestone Co. in 1908, the marble was cut with a steam-powered channeling machine," he recalled. "Everything has changed to electricity instead of steam."

Erwin's job for 59 years was sharpening the steel cutters of the channeling machines.

Carthage long has been known as the world's primary source of gray marble. The industry was launched here in 1885 with one quarry. By the turn of the century there were seven. The operations were merged into what is now the Carthage Marble Corp. It also has marble operations near Ash Grove and at Batesville, Ark.

"Most of the marble sold today is for interior use," the blacksmith said. "Large polishing and cutting facilities have been added here for work on over 100 different types of marble, primarily to be used in the interiors of buildings. When I started work we hauled nothing but rough-cut Carthage marble by rail for exterior use."

A primary example of Carthage marble for exterior use can be seen in the Jasper County courthouse in Carthage. The building was constructed in 1895. Carthage marble also was used in construction of the state capitol at Jefferson City.

Erwin also noted early day quarry workers used picks, shovels and horse-drawn wagons to remove dirt and debris covering the three layers of marble. Now crews move thousands of tons more per day with power equipment.

The corporation president, Roy E. Mayes Sr., said "Ray has been a faithful employe here for many years and we hate to see him leave. He has been a close friend of mine and everybody here at the plant."

Before leaving the blacksmith shop, Erwin bent over and picked up a large hammer. He went over to an anvil and stood there looking down.

"You know," he said, "I expect this anvil has been in the shop as long as I have and it hasn't worn much. It will be here for a long time."

His fellow workers say the memory of Erwin's presence will be there just as surely as the rugged anvil which serves as a symbol of more than half a century of honest toil.

Music Hall Change of Pace Works

NEW YORK (AP) — "Music Hall," NBC's weekly Wednesday night variety show, tried something different this week and, as most programs in this series do, it turned out very well. There were three musical acts, each vastly different from the other, and each in turn had many minutes in the spotlight.

First there was Nancy Wilson, an attractive young singer, in an assortment of night-club type songs.

Then there was Victor Borge, who as usual was vastly amusing as he clowned in familiar style around the keyboard and, also as usual, never quite satisfied the audience's desire to hear him play the piano more. And he plays the piano superbly.

Perhaps most impressive of all was the young team of Simon and Garfunkel who sang, for the most part, their own haunting bittersweet ballads.

Only at the very end were the stars together on stage, and then for a few lines of a song. It was all very effective. The settings were handsome and the mood quiet and easy.

Simon and Garfunkel are just one of many young performers who are currently enchanting audiences of all ages. They are two earnest young men who, without any props except Simon's guitar, can climb on any makeshift stage or stand in the center of an elaborate TV set and weave their musical spell.

Peter Noone, whose Herman's Hermits will be seen in a half hour musical documentary next Tuesday night on NBC, remarked recently that although the Beatles are generally credited with opening up the field for young musicians and launching the new sounds and new beats, it was really kicked off by Englishmen inspired by America's Elvis Presley, then an international rage among the teenagers.

"The sound really started as an American sound," said the 20-year-old Noone who is the Herman of the British quartet. Presley even started the mod look— remember his long hair and sideburns? Most of us stuck with instruments like the guitar, drums, bass and piano because we couldn't afford to have somebody like a saxophone player who couldn't sing and play."

Noone was 15 when with some Manchester schoolmates he formed a singing group. They performed in small clubs and gatherings around the English city "trying to pick up a few bob wherever we could."

"Pete Novak and the Heartbeats"— Noone then was Novak — became Herman's Hermits "because we decided to find the most unusual name in the world. What the name did not achieve, one hit record did. Now the boys comprise one of the best known groups, travel the world, play to jammed audiences and, not incidentally, make a lot of money.

Noone and his fellow musicians will be seen in a half-hour television show Tuesday which is made the easy way. A crew and cameras merely photographed Herman and the Hermits at work one night last fall when they were giving a concert for 40,000 at the Ohio State Fair. Then the film was edited to fit the time spot.

"We didn't have to do anything about it," Noone said. "not even fuss about makeup or clothes."

Each town in Spain has a patron saint and on Saint's Day the people join in a fiesta celebration.

Four candidates for the presidency in 1824 resulted in the election being decided by the House of Representatives. Andrew Jackson got the most votes but did not have a plurality and John Quincy Adams was declared the winner by the House vote.

Woodcutter Gives up Fight To Keep Land

ROUND MOUNTAIN, Calif. (AP) — The lonely battle of Virgil Gray vs. the U.S. government apparently is over.

Armed with shotguns and rifles, Gray for two months has held up completion of a $700-million, 900-mile power network feeding electricity from Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River to Southern California.

U.S. marshals and surveyors were run off the 40 acres on which the defiant woodcutter and his family of nine live 250 miles northeast of San Francisco.

Then, with federal officers ready Thursday to invade Gray's cabin en masse and take him into custody, he let his son talk about a compromise.

The decision may have been based mostly on the mumps. Two of Gray's seven children were in bed with that sickness this week. He said, "I don't want to see those little kids hurt."

His wife Jane and their eldest child, Ronald, 20, convinced the 53-year-old Gray that the demands of the federal government supercede his personal property rights.

Rodney Hamblin, deputy U.S. attorney in San Francisco assigned to the case, said Ronald agreed to be the go-between with his father.

Hamblin said the son told him the original offer of $100 an acre for the part of the 40-acre farm needed for the power line right-of-way wasn't good enough, and the path also cuts across "the only good field we have."

Small Italian Town Blossoms 4 Weeks a Year

SAN GIOVANNI in FIORE, Italy (AP) — This town of poverty whose name means St. John in Flower has blossomed for four fleeting weeks and receded again into its loneliness.

Eight thousand of its menfolk, almost every able-bodied male of the 20,000 population, have headed north again to their year-long jobs in Germany, France, Switzerland and the factories of North Italy.

Those who remain behind to wait through the dragging months until 1968's Christmas and New Year workers' home leave are the women, the children and the old.

St. John blooms only in those four weeks each year when the menfolk come back home.

Couples had to queue before the parish church over this Christmas and New Year holiday for 100 marriages crowded into the brief homecoming for young migrant men who had saved enough to wed the girls who waited.

Then they left the new brides to learn the town's old lesson of patience and loneliness until next year.

Homecoming fathers this year fondled 400 babies born last fall that they had never seen before.

It has been that way as long as the oldest resident can remember, because there is no work here.

The only change is that in the past year or two some of the migrant workers started taking their wives north with them.

"They found out that a lot of what they earn goes for meals and laundry," explained Don Giuseppe Andrieri, 72, the parish priest. "So some of them are taking their women with them."

"If you don't leave, you don't eat," said Biafora Oliverio, 59, who has been the town's busiest midwife for 35 years.

The priest agreed. "The town lives only on the providence of God," he said.

Train Collision Hospitalizes 27

SMETHWICK, England (AP) — Two trains collided at Smethwick in the English Midlands today and a fleet of ambulances took 27 injured persons to hospitals. A British Railways spokesman said no deaths had been reported.

One express was reported to have run into the rear of another near Smethwick's Rolfe Street Station. Wreckage blocked the main Birmingham-Manchester line.

The man who says a barking dog never bites is probably the descendant of pioneers who were scalped by Indians because they didn't pay attention to smoke signals.

Radio Evangelist Builds Highly Successful Program

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The choir bursts into "All Hail the Power of Jesus," and the announcer intones:

"From the headquarters city in Springfield, Missouri, U.S.A., across the nation and around the world it's Revivaltime."

And time for the Rev. C. M. Ward to address an estimated 25 million listeners on what he terms the fourth dimension of radio.

"Radio is the three S's," the bespectacled, balding evangelist explained before the show. "Suds, smoke and soap.

"Why not add a fourth S— salvation, which has an element that can be told again and again."

The theme of tonight's show is the poor and their advantages.

"Man is trying to do by legislation what can only be done by salvation," Ward asserts, and a subdued "amen" rises from the audience in the Assemblies of God studio.

"This giveaway is reaching serious proportions. How much money did it take to make a Tom Jefferson or an Abraham Lincoln? They used poverty."

The word goes out to Anchorage, Alaska; Boone, Iowa; Butte, Mont.; Nickerie, Surinam, and Nuku'alofa, Tonga — through 523 radio stations.

Ward's voice rises and falls with practiced ease, giving the effect of a spontaneous, unrehearsed sermon even to those in the studio who can see him reading from a script.

He is careful to speak in simple terms which can be understood by foreign audiences.

"I must avoid anything obscure or American similes," he said. "I avoid the ugly American."

The evangelist also is a practical man who has no illusions about high-brow messages.

"We have a million a year budget, so when the plate is passed we want the money to come in," he stated bluntly.

"Every week's message contains the same ingredients. It's like a Betty Crocker cake mix."

Ward, who began the Revivaltime program in 1952, comes by his calling naturally. Both his mother and father were evangelists and met while kneeling side by side at a prayer meeting in Winnipeg, Canada.

Each program is carried live by the American Broadcasting Co. and also is recorded twice, once for Canadian audiences and once for Americans and overseas.

The tapes are edited for special audiences. Armed Forces Radio, for instance, requires them to cut out appeals for offerings.

The Revivaltime show receives an average of 11,000 letters a month, most of them handwritten. Many of the letters request prayer books, inspirational materials or Christmas cards offered on the program.

Ward's staff has indexed his more than 700 sermons by subject today, and listeners with problems receive a copy of the appropriate sermon.

Suit Lincoln Wore to Theater Priced $50,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — The frock coat and suit President Abraham Lincoln wore to Ford's Theater the night of his assassination is being sought by the Interior Department for display in the newly restored theater.

The problem is not where to find the garments, but how to match the price their present owner is asking: $50,000.

As reported by the Washington Post, the clothes were given to Alfonso Donn, a White House doorkeeper, by the President's widow, Mary Todd Lincoln. They are presently owned by his granddaughter, Mrs. Marion J. Smith of North Carolina.

Mrs. Smith has offered to sell them to the government for inclusion in the Lincoln museum in Ford's Theater which is scheduled to resume live theatricals Jan. 21.

But so far, the Post reported, the Interior Department is unable either to get authorization to buy the garments or to find a patron to provide the money.

"We feel that these are the most important and meaningful Lincoln effects we could have," said Douglas H. Hubbard, an Interior Department official. "Our fear is that some private collector will buy them unless we are able to negotiate with Mrs. Smith and settle with her soon."

Tighter Reins Sought on Film Censors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Distributors of movies banned in Chicago and restricted in Dallas are asking the Supreme Court to tighten guidelines this year on city film censorship.

The Dallas distributor says bans should be limited to films found obscene under tests already set by the Supreme Court — and contends Dallas' standards are unconstitutionally vague and ambiguous.

The Chicago distributor says that city's appeal procedure is so time-consuming that films can be arbitrarily kept out of theaters "beyond any permissible constitutional limits."

The Chicago firm, Teitel Film Corp., also claims an Illinois court improperly ruled "Rent-A-Girl" and "Body of a Female" obscene on grounds they are calculated to arouse sexual desire.

Teitel argues the Supreme Court already has held that sexual arousal is not a test of obscenity.

The court will hear the Dallas case— and is expected to decide whether to accept the Chicago case— shortly after it reconvenes Jan. 15.

Neither case challenges the constitutionality of film censorship itself. That appeared to be upheld, with restraints, in the court's Freedman vs. Maryland decision in 1965.

But they ask further guidelines on just what an obscene film is and how long a city can keep a questionable picture out of theaters through appeal procedures.

Interstate Circuit, Inc., joined by United Artists Corp., contends Dallas was unconstitutionally vague when it restricted the Brigitte Bardot film "Viva Maria" on grounds of sexual promiscuity.

Teitel says Chicago kept its two films out of theaters 20 months before a state court ever ruled them obscene— and says the appeal procedure might have taken longer.

But the Illinois Supreme Court held Chicago's procedure to be constitutional and ruled both films were obscene.

State Gains 62 New Programs In 10 Years

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Missouri's government has established 62 new programs in the past 10 years — 45 in the last five years — that are financed by general tax money, the Missouri Public Expenditure Survey reported today.

Many of them are the result of increased demand for higher education, more realistic approach to mental disease and the demand that air and water pollution be controlled, the taxpayers' organization said after a study of the new programs.

Frequently the reason is that the federal government has pushed the programs and theatened the states with refusal of federal aid if they do not conform.

There have been 10 such programs in the past decade, the survey said, with three major ones just last year.

They included medical aid to welfare recipients (Medicaid), safety inspection of automobiles, and control of junkyards.

The survey avoided any specific recommendations but did say that costs of new programs should be projected for three to five-year periods instead of just for the one in the immediate future.

IRS Removes Mission From Tax-Exempt Roll

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Holy Land Christian Approach Mission, which solicits nationally for contributions, largely by mail, lost its tax-exempt status as a religious or charitable organization last week.

The mission's collections in a single year have amounted to as much as $1 million.

Donald J. Stadfield, district Internal Revenue Service spokesman, said Wednesday the Kansas City - headquartered mission now must pay taxes on its profits, like any ordinary corporation. It also means, he added, that contributions to the mission may no longer be claimed as income tax deductions by the contributors.

Stadfield declined to specify why the mission's exemption had been dropped. It operates an orphanage and crippled children's hospital at Bethlehem, now in Israeli - controlled Jordan.

There was no comment from mission headquarters. The Rev. Ralph E. Baney, 57, its executive director and general secretary, has been on a trip to Bethlehem and is expected back late this week.

The mission mails an eight-page magazine published 11 times a year to contributors at the price of $1 annually. The publication carries news of the mission's work and appeals for funds. From 350 to 400 Arab children occupy the orphanage. Another 50 or so are in the crippled children's hospital.

Also conducted by the mission is a sponsor-your-own-orphan program, with $10 a month suggested for contributors. Donations also are sought in return for Christmas and Easter cards with Holy Land motifs. The mission conducts tours of the Holy Land for Americans, and solicits funds for the distribution of Christmas baskets to the needy in Bethlehem.

Baney received international attention in 1960 with the claim that he may have found the lost cities of Sodom and Gomorrah while skin diving in the Dead Sea. He later wrote a paperback book titled, "The Search for Sodom and Gomorrah."

Zimmerman Files For Treasurer

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Former State Rep. William T. Zimmerman, R-Warrenton, filed Wednesday for the Republican nomination for state treasurer.

Zimmerman, who spent five terms in the House, lost to Haskell Holman, state auditor, in that race two years ago.

Two Democrats have filed for treasurer— William E. Robinson of Jefferson City, the party committee's state treasurer, and Lewis E. Morris of Jefferson City, a retired Army officer who runs for something every two years.

Small Italian Town Blossoms 4 Weeks a Year

SAN GIOVANNI in FIORE, Italy (AP) — This town of poverty whose name means St. John in Flower has blossomed for four fleeting weeks and receded again into its loneliness.

Eight thousand of its menfolk, almost every able-bodied male of the 20,000 population, have headed north again to their year-long jobs in Germany, France, Switzerland and the factories of North Italy.

Those who remain behind to wait through the dragging months until 1968's Christmas and New Year workers' home leave are the women, the children and the old.

St. John blooms only in those four weeks each year when the menfolk come back home.

Couples had to queue before the parish church over this Christmas and New Year holiday for 100 marriages crowded into the brief homecoming for young migrant men who had saved enough to wed the girls who waited.

Then they left the new brides to learn the town's old lesson of patience and loneliness until next year.

Homecoming fathers this year fondled 400 babies born last fall that they had never seen before.

It has been that way as long as the oldest resident can remember, because there is no work here.

The only change is that in the past year or two some of the migrant workers started taking their wives north with them.

"They found out that a lot of what they earn goes for meals and laundry," explained Don Giuseppe Andrieri, 72, the parish priest. "So some of them are taking their women with them."

"If you don't leave, you don't eat," said Biafora Oliverio, 59, who has been the town's busiest midwife for 35 years.

Fadeout by Mao's Wife Puzzling

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mao Tse-tung's fourth wife, Chiang Ching, has dropped from public view in Communist China. This, along with other developments, hints that the ferocity of the "Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution" is on the wane.

Mao Tse-tung now is 74. If his grip on the reins of power loosens, and, at the same time, the cultural revolution gradually fades away, it is possible that moderate elements will command more influence, even to the point of making Peking more approachable by other nations.

Just a year ago this month the political upheaval reached its peak of violence in what was called "the January revolution." Revolutionary rebels and teen-age Red Guards were instructed to "seize the power from the handful of party persons in authority who have taken the capitalist road."

The Chinese Communist press is renewing an appeal to Mao's supporters to "wage struggle by reasoning and not by force." Official press comment suggests an effort is being made to restore some order to the educational system, disrupted since August 1966 by the cultural revolution movement which kept youngsters out of schools and turned them against their teachers.

The movement probably will continue in one form or another for some time. But a year and a half has been a long time even for the most fanatic to keep up a full head of steam.

The failure of Mao's wife to appear at public functions could be significant. A Canton newspaper has said that "arduous struggle (in the cultural revolution) has impaired Comrade Chiang Ching's health." But Russian commentators brushed this aside as unlikely.

"Foreign observers," said a Moscow broadcast in Chinese to China last week, "feel that Chiang Ching's illness was due to outside pressure . . . What is interesting is that it was Chou En-lai who disclosed that Chiang Ching was ill."

Premier Chou is credited by some China-watchers with being a voice of moderation in the Mao camp. His conduct of government affairs, by his own account, has been seriously hampered by cultural revolution uproar.

Though holding the upper hand, the Mao faction by its own admission has failed to destroy its enemies. The official press still denounces "China's Khrushchev," but still cannot criticize President Liu Shao-chi by name. The Mao group may lack sufficient strength to call a party congress which could legally remove Liu from the chairmanship of the government.

In propaganda and education, the outcome remains in doubt. The press admits many "renegades" remain in authority and "some have even regained ranking positions."

It would be no surprise, should Mao's influence slip, if the contending sides in the struggle reached some form of compromise.

Chiang Ching's fadeout could mean that some in high places, even in Mao's camp, have had enough of the former actress and her ambitions.

Thread to Patch Damaged Heart Believed Found

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Scientists at a New Jersey research firm believe they have discovered a thread that could be used to patch a damaged heart.

The thread was described here by Dr. Leslie K. Gulton, president of Gulton Industries, Inc., of Metuchen, N.J., a pioneer company in the development of polycrystaline piezoelectric material.

The way to make the thread was discovered last week, Gulton told newsmen Thursday.

He said the thread incorporates tiny crystals that transform electrical energy into mechanical energy and may open approaches to solving the problem of building an artificial heart.

It is capable of being woven into "cloth" and thus has several potential applications for mending or replacing damaged hearts.

GOP Favors Piling up For Reagan

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan, already a million-dollar-plus fund raiser for the Republican party, is collecting the kind of political IOU's that helped Richard M. Nixon and Barry Goldwater win presidential nominations.

From traditionally Republican Iowa to new GOP country in the Old South, party chairmen beam with delight when they land the California governor for fund-raising dinners. He is one of the biggest draws in Republican history— "the all-time champ," according to Chairman James Halley of the California Republican Central Committee.

Reagan will test his appeal in the heartland of the East— the Establishment of Dewey, Willkie and Eisenhower— on a tour next month of New York, Pennsylvania and Washington, D.C.

The name Reagan to date has meant money to hard-pressed party finance officials in Oregon, Seattle, Houston, Dallas, Des Moines, Milwaukee and Columbia, S.C. Gratitude for similar favors created blocs of loyal national convention delegates for Nixon in 1960 and Goldwater in 1964.

Reagan keeps insisting he is not a candidate and hopes only to head a "favorite son" delegation from California to the 1968 convention.

In answer to questions at a Dec. 19 news conference, Reagan conceded that the backing of conservative Republicans who want him to run for president is "gratifying, there is no question about that."

He added, however: "My position hasn't changed at all. I'm not a candidate."

Nevertheless, the remark by Gov. Tom McCall of Oregon that Reagan is "the hottest political property around" is becoming a favorite saying among Reagan watchers.

In dollar terms, Reagan raised nearly $1.4 million in September and October for depleted GOP coffers, says Tom Reed, a wealthy 33-year-old former appointments secretary who handles the governor's out-of-state political contacts.

National speech-making tours are described by Reagan as "party chores that should be done." He is well aware that such ventures heighten speculation they are fronts for a full-scale campaign for the GOP presidential nomination.

Reed refuses to reveal how much Reagan is paid for appearing at party events on the ground that it's a private matter, but he denies as "absolutely false" a report that Reagan got $15,000 for a Milwaukee speech in September.

All Reagan's appearance fees go into a special trust fund set up within the California Republican party strictly to finance the governor's out-of-state political trips, Reed said.

Reed says he expects the fund to break even for 1967, but if there is a surplus, it will be refunded to states where Reagan has appeared on "a fair and equitable basis" to be determined by Reagan.

TownThrives On Liquor Store Income

JAMESTOWN, N.C. (AP) — They call this quiet Piedmont North Carolina community "the town that laid a golden egg with a legal liquor store."

Jamestown is a tiny place with no police force and only 1,338 residents, but in six years it has received profits of more than $1.5 million from its Alcoholic Beverage Control store.

Says Carl Wester, administrator of the North Carolina ABC system: "I don't know of a retail liquor outlet in America for the size of the town that sells as much liquor. During the past fiscal year the Jamestown store had sales totaling more than $2.5 million."

The store, which has six clerks, is only a stone's throw from the corporate limits of High Point, a dry city with a population of more than 62,000. Twice in recent years High Point, noted for its many furniture plants, has voted against establishing ABC liquor stores.

Wester estimated that 95 per cent of the business at the Jamestown store comes from High Point.

"Let's face it," said one Jamestown merchant, "the store was built to get High Point business."

Mayor Thomas C. Ragsdale said, "The store hasn't caused us any trouble. The funds have enabled us to get some projects that we wouldn't have had otherwise."

The prosperous industrial community has a new $275,000 colonial-style Town Hall, a new fire truck, a $925,000 sewage system and has spent $540,000 for street improvements. In addition, the town has a tax rate of only 63 cents per $100 property valuation.

"If anything the store has put gray hairs in my head because we've had more money to spend," said Town Manager Charles P. Turner.

He recalled that voters approved the establishment of the liquor store by only about 30 votes. When the store opened Dec. 16, 1961, customers were waiting in line in a cold rain. Some had been there for hours. Traffic was tied up for blocks.

William Lawrence, who operates a service station nearby and signed the original petition requesting a liquor referendum, said, "The only complaint I have is that it causes heavy traffic on holidays and cars can't get into my station."

The five-member Town Council, which formerly used a service station as its meeting place, now meets in a luxurious room in the new Town Hall.

The town has an Alcohol Education Center which helps educate the public on the evils of excessive drinking.

Turner said $215,000 has been spent for rehabilitation, education and law enforcement work.

Mayor Ragsdale said that when law enforcement help is needed the town calls on the Guilford County sheriff's department.

The enabling legislative act which authorized the Jamestown liquor referendum specified that 70 per cent of the profits go to Jamestown. The remaining 30 per cent is divided on a per capita basis and goes to Guilford County and other municipalities in the county except Greensboro, which has ABC stores.

Jones Tried to Throw Out Redistrict Clause

KENNETT - Rep. Paul C. Jones, commenting on the present Missouri crisis created by the decision of federal court panel to reject the state's congressional redistricting plan, says he tried to have an amendment prohibiting at-large elections for congress thrown out as not being germain to the bill to which it was attached.

The bill was passed and signed into law on Dec. 15 and is now a major factor in Missouri's knotty redistricting problem.

The amendment prohibiting at-large elections was attached in the U. S. senate to a private bill concerning an immigrant, Jones said.

Missouri's 10th district congressman opposed it on the floor of the house on a point of order, declaring it was not germain to the original bill.

The house passed the measure, however, after adding an amendment of its own which exempted Hawaii and New Mexico from its provision because these two states have been electing congressmen at-large.

The measure then went to conference committee where its final form was achieved.

Without such a law, an at-large election in Missouri this year to choose 10 congressmen would have been a definite possibility in view of the recent federal court panel decision.

Convicts Rally To Support of 7-Year-Old Hemophiliac

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — Fred Bettger Jr., 7, has a pair of Lone Ranger sixguns today and his father has $302 to help pay the medical bills from his son's hemophilia— all thanks to the inmates at Colorado State Penitentiary.

The convicts organized a "Freddy Fund" to raise money for the youngster after they learned his family was in financial straits. Contributions came in from all over the state and blood donors also came forward.

The youngster has required 60 pints of blood— at $27.50 apiece — since September according to his father, an unemployed truck driver.

Inmates on the staff of The Chronicle, a semimonthly prison newspaper, added the pair of sixguns, each complete with a "sulver" bullet, when they turned the money over to the family Thursday.

When his major league playing days were over, Frank Chance, famous first baseman, bought the Los Angeles club in the Pacific Coast League and managed it in 1916 and 1917.

Plans to Film Pearl Harbor Movie Delayed

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Notes and comments on the Hollywood scene—

Plans to stage the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor with a massive two-nation film production have hit a delay because of the Vietnam war. Filming was supposed to have begun this month on the Japanese portion of "Tora! Tora! Tora!," a monumental undertaking by 20th Century-Fox and the company of famed director Akira Kurosawa.

"But the picture can't be made without the cooperation of the United States Navy," reports Richard Fleischer, who is scheduled to direct the American portion of the film. "The Navy has offered to help, but it can't guarantee the use of ships because of the Vietnam situation.

"We'd be in terrible shape if we started filming with the ships and then had them pulled out for Vietnam. So now the picture is postponed until fall, when the situation might be more stable. The plan is to shoot the American part of the story first, and then follow with the Japanese portion."

"Tora," which means tiger, was the code word used by Japanese pilots to signal the success of their Dec. 7, 1941 mission . . .

Audiences at world's fairs have been dazzled by the use of multiple projections on a single screen.

Fadeout by Mao's Wife Puzzling

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Mao Tse-tung's fourth wife, Chiang Ching, has dropped from public view in Communist China. This, along with other developments, hints that the ferocity of the "Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution" is on the wane.

Mao Tse-tung now is 74. If his grip on the reins of power loosens, and, at the same time, the cultural revolution gradually fades away, it is possible that moderate elements will command more influence, even to the point of making Peking more approachable by other nations.

Just a year ago this month the political upheaval reached its peak of violence in what was called "the January revolution." Revolutionary rebels and teen-age Red Guards were instructed to "seize the power from the handful of party persons in authority who have taken the capitalist road."

The Chinese Communist press is renewing an appeal to Mao's supporters to "wage struggle by reasoning and not by force." Official press comment suggests an effort is being made to restore some order to the educational system, disrupted since August 1966 by the cultural revolution movement which kept youngsters out of schools and turned them against their teachers.

The movement probably will continue in one form or another for some time. But a year and a half has been a long time even for the most fanatic to keep up a full head of steam.

The failure of Mao's wife to appear at public functions could be significant. A Canton newspaper has said that "arduous struggle (in the cultural revolution) has impaired Comrade Chiang Ching's health." But Russian commentators brushed this aside as unlikely.

"Foreign observers," said a Moscow broadcast in Chinese to China last week, "feel that Chiang Ching's illness was due to outside pressure . . . What is interesting is that it was Chou En-lai who disclosed that Chiang Ching was ill."

Premier Chou is credited by some China-watchers with being a voice of moderation in the Mao camp. His conduct of government affairs, by his own account, has been seriously hampered by cultural revolution uproar.

Though holding the upper hand, the Mao faction by its own admission has failed to destroy its enemies. The official press still denounces "China's Khrushchev," but still cannot criticize President Liu Shao-chi by name. The Mao group may lack sufficient strength to call a party congress which could legally remove Liu from the chairmanship of the government.

In propaganda and education, the outcome remains in doubt. The press admits many "renegades" remain in authority and "some have even regained ranking positions."

It would be no surprise, should Mao's influence slip, if the contending sides in the struggle reached some form of compromise.

Chiang Ching's fadeout could mean that some in high places, even in Mao's camp, have had enough of the former actress and her ambitions.

GOP Favors Piling up For Reagan

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan, already a million-dollar-plus fund raiser for the Republican party, is collecting the kind of political IOU's that helped Richard M. Nixon and Barry Goldwater win presidential nominations.

From traditionally Republican Iowa to new GOP country in the Old South, party chairmen beam with delight when they land the California governor for fund-raising dinners. He is one of the biggest draws in Republican history— "the all-time champ," according to Chairman James Halley of the California Republican Central Committee.

Reagan will test his appeal in the heartland of the East— the Establishment of Dewey, Willkie and Eisenhower— on a tour next month of New York, Pennsylvania and Washington, D.C.

The name Reagan to date has meant money to hard-pressed party finance officials in Oregon, Seattle, Houston, Dallas, Des Moines, Milwaukee and Columbia, S.C. Gratitude for similar favors created blocs of loyal national convention delegates for Nixon in 1960 and Goldwater in 1964.

Thread to Patch Damaged Heart Believed Found

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Scientists at a New Jersey research firm believe they have discovered a thread that could be used to patch a damaged heart.

The thread was described here by Dr. Leslie K. Gulton, president of Gulton Industries, Inc., of Metuchen, N.J., a pioneer company in the development of polycrystaline piezoelectric material.

The way to make the thread was discovered last week, Gulton told newsmen Thursday.

He said the thread incorporates tiny crystals that transform electrical energy into mechanical energy and may open approaches to solving the problem of building an artificial heart.

It is capable of being woven into "cloth" and thus has several potential applications for mending or replacing damaged hearts.

If You Were the Judge

Sonic Boom Flips Man But He Can't Collect

Grogin was admiring the young ladies as he strolled down the street. While he was unable to break through their ice barrier. The result? The sonic boom flipped the nonplussed girl watcher into the air.

Landing on his noggin, Grogin sued the U.S. government for his injuries.

"It's just not safe to walk on the streets anymore," he complained in court. "If the government is going to send out supersonic planes, they should be made super safe."

"While the government may owe Grogin an apology," reroted a U.S. attorney, "that's all it owes him. The government can't be held responsible if a sonic boom flips pedestrians into the air."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the government pay for the nob on Grogin's noggin?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that the U.S. government cannot be sued without its permission and that such permission is granted in statutes that are enacted. In this case, he concluded, no statute has been passed that would enable a person to collect damages for personal injuries resulting from the sonic boom of an authorized flight of a government-owned airplane.

Mrs. Edwards was arrested for investigation of murder and was lodged in the Pemiscot county Jail at Caruthersville.

Bateman was pronounced dead on arrival at Pemiscot County Memorial hospital and his body was taken to the German Funeral Home.

Ann Landers

Women Pester Man in Elevator, He Is Advised to Take Stairs

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you published a letter from a girl who wanted to know how to defend herself against a man who got fresh in a self-service elevator. I'm a male who would like some similar advice.

I am a middle-aged man with a lovely wife and family. I am not interested in playing around, but the women who work in this building won't leave me alone. I am well-built, have prematurely gray hair and I look a lot like Cary Grant. On three separate occasions in the past six months I have been propositioned in the elevator. The last time, a woman who is at least 10 years older than I am pushed the emergency stop button between floors and said, "Would you like to kiss me?"

If you think I am putting you on, let me assure you, you have never received a more earnest plea for help in your life. Thanks in advance, Ann. -- CLAUSTROPHOBIA.

Dear Claus: I don't know what you have, fella, but apparently you have a lot more than you need. My advice is to take the stairs. Not only would it solve your problem but stair-climbing is good for the ol' ticker, according to the heart specialists.

Dear Ann Landers: Last week our neighbor invited several couples to her home for dinner. She served horseradish with the roast beef and my husband raved over it. He said it was just like the horseradish his mother used to make and he asked her how she fixed it. She replied, "I didn't fix it. I BOUGHT it." She then offered to buy him a bottle as a "gift." Nothing more was said but I didn't like her getting THAT friendly.

Yesterday the woman brought over a jar of horseradish. I tried every which way to get her to let me pay for it, but she wouldn't tell me how much it cost and she left without the money. When my husband came home I told him about the incident and he said, "Wasn't that sweet of her?" Well. I have another version of her generosity" and I let my husband know exactly how I felt.

I want to mail the horseradish back. My husband says I am acting like a fool. Please tell me why a woman would insist on giving someone else's husband a jar of horseradish unless she had ulterior motives.--HANDS OFF

Dear Off: Good grief, Lady, the neighbor didn't try to give your husband a pair of silk pajamas or a set of matched luggage.

Thank her for the jar of horseradish and ask her where she purchased it so you can buy it from now on. Then bake her a cake as "payment."

Dear Ann Landers: Because: (a) alcoholism is increasing and (b) people who have had several drinks are not self-disciplined and (c) every community has some folks who are unemployable because of alcohol and (d) at least half the accidents involve a drinking or a drunken driver, I would like to suggest that the bartenders refuse to serve another drink to a patron who has had too much. How about it? --- MISS EXPERIMENT

Dear Miss: In Illinois (as well as in other states) it is against the law for the bartender to serve liquor to a person who is, according to his judgment, intoxicated. The word "judgment" is the hooker, of course. Some bartenders have better judgment than others.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents. . if you can't bet them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

State Adds 62 New Programs in 10 Years

JEFFERSON CITY - Missouri state government has added 62 new programs financed from general revenues in the past 10 years, a Missouri Public Expenditure Survey study reported today.

Forty - five of the programs were added in the last five years, including a number of larger ones, the privately supported governmental research organization reported.

It recalled that those established in 1963 included university branches at St. Louis and Kansas City and three intensive treatment mental health centers. Thirteen new programs were added in 1965 and twenty-one in the last session of the legislature, which enacted the major new programs of medicaid and financial aid to kindergartens.

The survey noted that new programs result from such causes as more college students, devolpment of rapid treatment of mental illness, and modern environmental problems such as water and air pollution.

Another cause, it said, is the federal government, which gives impetus to new state programs by providing matching funds and by requiring states to adopt programs under penaly of losing federal funds. The later has occurred increasingly in recent years, the Survey said.

Ten new state programs added in the last 10 years were given their impetus by the federal government, the Survey reported including three adopted by the last legislature under threat of loss of federal funds. The three were medicaid, motor vehicle inspection and junkyard control.

The survey did not pass on the merit of any of the new programs. It reported that nearly all have increased in cost and some substantially. It commended the legislature's system of appending cost estimates to proposed legislation but said the system would be improved if estimates for a three-to five-year period were required instead of the one-year estimates now normally prepared.

The survey also suggested that the legislature's Fiscal Affairs Committee and staff by given permanent status. The law providing the fiscal committee and staff expires January 1, 1970.

The study reported that new programs established in the last 10 years now require annual appropriations of $67.8 million, including $48.8 million for those established in the last five years. Rising revenues should allow addition of some new programs in the future, but addition of programs at the rate and scope of the last five years could strain the state's finances, the Survey said. It suggested that new programs be added only as growing revenues become available to finance them and their projected growth.

The survey pointed out that the state's adoption of federal programs extends federal control to the state tax moneys required to finance the state's share of the cost. Two hundred state-and-local government aid programs have been added by the federal government since 1963, bringing the total to more than 460, and presenting a confused maze, it said.

The survey urged creation by Congress of a proposed bipartisan Government Program evaluation commission to determine the effectiveness of federal programs. The commission would recommend which programs should be continued and the priority they should have in the appropriation of funds. The legislation creating the commission is expected to receive consideration when Congress reconvenes, the survey said.

Sonic Boom Flips Man But He Can't Collect

Grogin was admiring the young ladies as he strolled down the street. While he was unable to break through their ice barrier. The result? The sonic boom flipped the nonplussed girl watcher into the air.

Landing on his noggin, Grogin sued the U.S. government for his injuries.

"It's just not safe to walk on the streets anymore," he complained in court. "If the government is going to send out supersonic planes, they should be made super safe."

"While the government may owe Grogin an apology," reroted a U.S. attorney, "that's all it owes him. The government can't be held responsible if a sonic boom flips pedestrians into the air."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the government pay for the nob on Grogin's noggin?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that the U.S. government cannot be sued without its permission and that such permission is granted in statutes that are enacted. In this case, he concluded, no statute has been passed that would enable a person to collect damages for personal injuries resulting from the sonic boom of an authorized flight of a government-owned airplane.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. (AP)-- Bill D. Burlison says he will stay in the race for the 10th congressional District Democratic nomination "no matter where the district lines are drawn."

Burlison is Cape Girardeau County prosecuting attorney.

Five others also are seeking the nomination in the heavily Democratic 10th District which is represented now by Rep. Paul C. Jones, D.Kennett, who plans to retire at the end of his present term.

Hayti Man Killed in Family Row

HAYTI - A 68-year old Hayti resident was shot and killed Tuesday, during a family argument, the highway patrol said.

Dead is Ben Bateman, who allegedly was shot by his daughter, Mrs. Lavada Edwards, 42, of Hayti, officers said.

Mrs. Edwards was arrested for investigation of murder and was lodged in the Pemiscot county Jail at Caruthersville.

Troopers who investigated said they were told that Mrs. Edwards became involved in an argument with her daughter, Jimmie Dean Bateman, 26. When Bateman intervened, officers said, he was shot in the side with a 16-gauge shotgun.

Bateman was pronounced dead on arrival at Pemiscot County Memorial hospital and his body was taken to the German Funeral Home.

Women Pester Man in Elevator, He Is Advised to Take Stairs

Dear Ann Landers: Recently you published a letter from a girl who wanted to know how to defend herself against a man who got fresh in a self-service elevator. I'm a male who would like some similar advice.

I am a middle-aged man with a lovely wife and family. I am not interested in playing around, but the women who work in this building won't leave me alone. I am well-built, have prematurely gray hair and I look a lot like Cary Grant. On three separate occasions in the past six months I have been propositioned in the elevator. The last time, a woman who is at least 10 years older than I am pushed the emergency stop button between floors and said, "Would you like to kiss me?"

If you think I am putting you on, let me assure you, you have never received a more earnest plea for help in your life. Thanks in advance, Ann. -- CLAUSTROPHOBIA.

Dear Claus: I don't know what you have, fella, but apparently you have a lot more than you need. My advice is to take the stairs. Not only would it solve your problem but stair-climbing is good for the ol' ticker, according to the heart specialists.

Dear Ann Landers: Last week our neighbor invited several couples to her home for dinner. She served horseradish with the roast beef and my husband raved over it. He said it was just like the horseradish his mother used to make and he asked her how she fixed it. She replied, "I didn't fix it. I BOUGHT it." She then offered to buy him a bottle as a "gift." Nothing more was said but I didn't like her getting THAT friendly.

Yesterday the woman brought over a jar of horseradish. I tried every which way to get her to let me pay for it, but she wouldn't tell me how much it cost and she left without the money. When my husband came home I told him about the incident and he said, "Wasn't that sweet of her?" Well. I have another version of her generosity" and I let my husband know exactly how I felt.

I want to mail the horseradish back. My husband says I am acting like a fool. Please tell me why a woman would insist on giving someone else's husband a jar of horseradish unless she had ulterior motives. -- HANDS OFF

Dear Off: Good grief, Lady, the neighbor didn't try to give your husband a pair of silk pajamas or a set of matched luggage.

Thank her for the jar of horseradish and ask her where she purchased it so you can buy it from now on. Then bake her a cake as "payment."

Dear Ann Landers: Because: (a) alcoholism is increasing and (b) people who have had several drinks are not self-disciplined and (c) every community has some folks who are unemployable because of alcohol and (d) at least half the accidents involve a drinking or a drunken driver, I would like to suggest that the bartenders refuse to serve another drink to a patron who has had too much. How about it? -- MISS EXPERIMENT

Dear Miss: In Illinois (as well as in other states) it is against the law for the bartender to serve liquor to a person who is, according to his judgment, intoxicated. The word "judgment" is the hooker, of course. Some bartenders have better judgment than others.

If you have trouble getting along with your parents. . .if you can't bet them to let you live your own life, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

State Adds 62 New Programs in 10 Years

JEFFERSON CITY - Missouri state government has added 62 new programs financed from general revenues in the past 10 years, a Missouri Public Expenditure Survey study reported today.

Forty - five of the programs were added in the last five years, including a number of larger ones, the privately supported governmental research organization reported.

It recalled that those established in 1963 included university branches at St. Louis and Kansas City and three intensive treatment mental health centers. Thirteen new programs were added in 1965 and twenty-one in the last session of the legislature, which enacted the major new programs of medicaid and financial aid to kindergartens.

The survey noted that new programs result from such causes as more college students, development of rapid treatment of mental illness, and modern environmental problems such as water and air pollution.

Another cause, it said, is the federal government, which gives impetus to new state programs by providing matching funds and by requiring states to adopt programs under penaly of losing federal funds. The later has occurred increasingly in recent years, the Survey said.

Ten new state programs added in the last 10 years were given their impetus by the federal government, the Survey reported including three adopted by the last legislature under threat of loss of federal funds. The three were medicaid, motor vehicle inspection and junkyard control.

The survey did not pass on the merit of any of the new programs. It reported that nearly all have increased in cost and some substantially. It commended the legislature's system of appending cost estimates to proposed legislation but said the system would be improved if estimates for a three-to five-year period were required instead of the one-year estimates now normally prepared.

The survey also suggested that the legislature's Fiscal Affairs Committee and staff by given permanent status. The law providing the fiscal committee and staff expires January 1, 1970.

The study reported that new programs established in the last 10 years now require annual appropriations of $67.8 million, including $48.8 million for those established in the last five years. Rising revenues should allow addition of some new programs in the future, but addition of programs at the rate and scope of the last five years could strain the state's finances, the Survey said. It suggested that new programs be added only as growing revenues become available to finance them and their projected growth.

The survey pointed out that the state's adoption of federal programs extends federal control to the state tax moneys required to finance the state's share of the cost. Two hundred state-and-local government aid programs have been added by the federal government since 1963, bringing the total to more than 460, and presenting a confused maze, it said.

The survey urged creation by Congress of a proposed bipartisan Government Program evaluation commission to determine the effectiveness of federal programs. The commission would recommend which programs should be continued and the priority they should have in the appropriation of funds. The legislation creating the commission is expected to receive consideration when Congress reconvenes, the survey said.

Hours off Duty Slow On Marcus

MARCUS ISLAND (AP) — A sign at the tiny airstrip on this diminuitive island in the central Pacific gives the latitude and longitude.

"That's so people who come here will know where they've been," says Sean Apren. Bill John of San Francisco, one of the 32-man Coast Guard garrison.

"We always send the location to our folks back home so they find it on a map. Nobody's ever heard of it before."

Marcus is about a mile long and three-fourths of a mile wide at its widest. The Coast Guardsmen here beam loran navigational aid signals to U.S. airplanes and ships, including nuclear submarines, in the area. They also man a small weather station.

This was one of numerous Japanese island fortresses but never became a World War II battleground like nearby Iwo Jima or Tarawa, Saipan and Tinian. American forces moved in quietly after the Japanese surrender in 1945.

Sometime this year it, along with its sister islands of the Bonin chain, is due to be returned to Japanese sovereignty.

Whether the U.S. base will remain is a moot point at present, probably to be negotiated in the final Japanese-American agreement.

Meanwhile, the Coast Guard detachment and four civilians—all American citizens of Hawaiian descent — fight boredom and loneliness when off duty.

"We're too busy to be bored on duty," says CWO Jean Jeter, former resident of San Antonio, Tex., now executive officer on Marcus.

"There's always plenty do on the job. "Just keeping all the equipment in working order can be a fulltime proposition."

The island's resupply is almost entirely by air. Planes are scheduled to come in once a week. Sometimes they do.

Hours off Duty Slow On Marcus

MARCUS ISLAND (AP) — A sign at the tiny airstrip on this diminuitive island in the central Pacific gives the latitude and longitude.

"That's so people who come here will know where they've been," says Sean Apren. Bill John of San Francisco, one of the 32-man Coast Guard garrison.

"We always send the location to our folks back home so they find it on a map. Nobody's ever heard of it before."

Marcus is about a mile long and three-fourths of a mile wide at its widest. The Coast Guardsmen here beam loran navigational aid signals to U.S. airplanes and ships, including nuclear submarines, in the area. They also man a small weather station.

This was one of numerous Japanese island fortresses but never became a World War II battleground like nearby Iwo Jima or Tarawa, Saipan and Tinian. American forces moved in quietly after the Japanese surrender in 1945.

Sometime this year it, along with its sister islands of the Bonin chain, is due to be returned to Japanese sovereignty.

Whether the U.S. base will remain is a moot point at present, probably to be negotiated in the final Japanese-American agreement.

Meanwhile, the Coast Guard detachment and four civilians— all American citizens of Hawaiian descent — fight boredom and loneliness when off duty.

"We're too busy to be bored on duty," says CWO Jean Jeter, former resident of San Antonio, Tex., now executive officer on Marcus.

"There's always plenty do on the job. "Just keeping all the equipment in working order can be a fulltime proposition."

The island's resupply is almost entirely by air. Planes are scheduled to come in once a week. Sometimes they do.
